EFFECT OF THE EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION

From Our Own Correspondent.

KEY WEST, Fla., Thursday, Jan. 29, 1863.

On the night of the 22d there arrived in our harbor the two sister ships of war, the Tioga and the Sonoma, the former from a cruise among the Bahamas, bringing as a prize of war the British steamer Pearl, which is one of several whose names have been furnished as being engaged for the rebels to run our blockade. The Pearl is an iron boat, with side-wheels, 180 feet length of hull and 14 feet beam, draws but five feet water and will run sixteen miles per hour. She has but little cargo, and that about 1,000 blue jackets. Vessel and cargo owned by Mr. GEO. WIGG, a straw man, and associate of her British Majesty's Consul, J. V. CRAWFORD, consigned to ADDERLY & Co., Nassau. She refused to stop until several guns had been fired. The Sonoma comes from the Mexican coast, and has the rebel steamer Virginia as a prize, now on the way here, with a valuable cargo of wines, coffee, &c. This steamer was seized by the Mexican authorities for some violation of their laws, and was subsequently turned over to our possession, and will doubtless be a prize. There is no pretence other than that she is rebel property.

On Friday morning, the 24th, the steamer Swan, a condemned prize, purchased by parties here and at New-York, and refitted in good order, was ready, with steam on and all aboard, to start for New-Orleans, when suddenly the Captain was called on for the vessel's papers, for the inspection of Admiral BAILEY, with the notice that the steamer should remain at the wharf. It appears that the managing owner of the Swan had employed as captain and pilot two men whose record is not clear proof of loyalty. The Captain is a man who, two weeks since, being pilot of the steamer Menamon Sanford, run her ashore with an entire regiment of troops on board, (the One Hundred and Fifty-sixth New-York Volunteers,) who would have thrown him overboard at the time if they could have got at him. Upon his arrival he was at once employed to take the Swan to New-Orleans, and being about ready when the news of the wreck of the ship Sparkling Sea (with the Twenty-fifth New-York Battery) reached here she was engaged from the owner, at $700 per day, to proceed to the relief of the ship, and went up to within five miles of her, when the Captain protested. In opposition to the opinions of other competent seamen, that it was unsafe to go alongside of the wreck, and finally returned, having accomplished nothing. Other small vessels went to the wreck, and saved twelve of the eighty horses that were alive at the wrecking of the ship, and Capt. WALSH, of the Sparkling Sea, says this steamer could have gone and saved the whole of them. For pilot of the Swan they had employed Capt. JAMES DUKES, who arrived here a few days since Captain on a prize running the blockade with cotton. He has employed much of his time in recounting his adventures in eluding the blockading vessels several times already, and his intention to continue his enterprise in that direction at any and all fitting opportunities. Capt. DUKES' well-known fame as a daring and resolute man, united with his equally palpable rebel proclivities, which he is at no pains to disguise, operated somehow to cause the detention of the steamer, and the consequent removal of himself and the Captain from the vessel. She has since been permitted to depart with other officers, after being bonded in $30,000 to do no unlawful act.

The ship Sparkling Sea has become a total wreck, and the rigging, sails, anchor, chains, stores and twelve horses, have been brought down by the wrecking vessel. The Marshal is now selling the same at auction, at very high prices. The sails and rigging sell for about what they cost a few years since. The horses, after starving, sold for $100 to $140.

Vessels of the Banks Expedition, returning, continue to stop here for coal, and keep up a continuous labor in their supply both day and night. The last ones here are the St. Marys, Quincey, Merrimac, Northern Light and Albany.

The fine screw-steamer Continental arrived on the 25th, from New-York, with the Fifty-third Maine Regiment, bound for New-Orleans; also, the small steamer Shetucket, bound north. They are, merely in want of coal, and will proceed at once.

There are about thirty prize vessels in this harbor, awaiting the action of the Court, and many of this number have been here for three to four months, under expence and charge for keeping, with other sacrifices consequent upon delay. The public may want to know the reason for this, and I feel bound to inform them that the Admiralty Judge has been absent, enjoying himself; and, although it is now four weeks since his return, there is not yet one case of all these that is noticed for sale.

Since the arrival of the New-Year Proclamation, the outward signs of loyalty among some of the inhabitants of our island have been given to the breeze from the housetops in all directions. These demonstrations have in some instances called forth the denunciation and threats of rebel masters, but to very little purpose—the flags are all "there" at early morn, evincing the firm reliance these people have that the day of their deliverance has dawned.

An American bark, under English colors, was sunk in the Gulf, off Gun Key, Bahamas, and became a total loss. The Captain has arrived here with his crew, and reports the vessel as the bark Joseph Fisk, of Portland, Me., with a full cargo of sugar and molasses, from Cardenas, Cuba, for Portland. The crew of a Bahama wrecking vessel, the sloop Julia, also arrived here two days since in a small boat, and report that they were blown off the coast while sending assistance to a shipwrecked vessel, and losing their vessel finally made our coast at Cape Florida.

The prize steamer Virginia arrived on the 26th, and her case is now undergoing examination. The cargo is a valuable one, and was received on board at sea, from a schooner from Havana. The master of the Virginia, Capt. JOHNSON, says that this is the second time he has been captured, and that the Virginia belongs to Spanish owners, who have made four successful trips with her from the African coast with negroes, and landed them in Cuba.

War vessels now in the harbor are the frigate St. Lawrence; sloop-of-war Dale, steamers Penguin, Magnolia, Hendrik Hudson; schooners Eugenia and Ariel; steamer Octorara.

Merchant Vessels—Ships Wizard King, T. J. Southard, Lydia, Essex; schooners Lilly, David Faust, D. E. Borden, Ann Eliza; steamers Shetucket and Cumbria, and Union, for New-Orleans.

Three prize steamers the Adela the Pearl and Virginia, and about twenty-eight small sailing vessels.

The brig A. Hopkins, of Mystic Connecticut has just arrived this morning from Vera Cruz via New Orleans having carried to Vera Cruz a cargo of army wagons for the French. Among the ships papers is the special licence to proceed to New Orleans signed by the President and Secretary of the Treasury, all under the same voyage. Verily this is serving God and Mammon. F.

LATER FROM NEW-ORLEANS.

ARRIVAL OF THE GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The Alabama Reported to Have Been Off the Southwest Pass.

The steamship Geo. Washington, Capt. GAGER, from New-Orleans, on the 27th, to H. B. CROMWELL & Co., bringing the United States mails, full cargo and passengers, arrived yesterday. She made the passage from New-Orleans to Sandy Hook in the quick time of six days and fifteen hours.

She left at anchor at the Southwest Pass steam frigate Mississippi, which left New-Orleans on the 26th to look out for the Alabama, reported to have been off the Pass a few days previous, and to have taken a pilot from one of the pilot boats.

Bark Commerce and ship Herald were inside, bound up. On Feb. 2, 9 A. M., in lat. 37° 20', long. 74° 40', passed close to steamship Ericsson, steering S. W., having in tow a large raft with a red flag on it.

OUR NEW-ORLEANS CORRESPONDENCE

The Present Condition of Affairs in the Department—Bad Effects of Conciliation upon the Rebels—Port Hudson Being Strengthened—Possibility of Another Cut-off.

DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF, NEW-ORLEANS, Tuesday, Jan. 27, 1863.

The defeat of our army under Gen. SHERMAN, the capture of the Harriet Lane, and the loss of Galveston, are events that do not add much to the good humor or hopefulness of our people. In addition to this, we hear of the constant effects perceptible, arising from a radical change in the administration of our local affairs. The consequence is that we have all the stagnation and depression of May last, without the hopefulness of an untried future. I am sorry to say that all business is at a stand-still; the merchants are doing nothing, and, what is worse, the apparent hopelessness of a speedy opening of the Mississippi seems destined to act as an incubus for a long and intolerable future. I have, in months past, time and again urged the importance of sending Gen. BUTLER a few thousand troops to enable him to take the offensive, at least so far as his immediate vicinity was concerned, but my arguments and his petitions failed, and I now have the satisfaction, or rather the mortification, to find JEFF. DAVIS almost using my own words in his language to the rebel Congress, when urging the importance of keeping the Mississippi closed. He admits that commercial intercourse along the great "aorta of our continent" would be a most direct attack on Richmond, and insinuates, if he does not state it openly, that the Mississippi open the rebellion would be at an end. Such has been all along the feeling of every sensible man in this city, and of everybody in fact who has paid any attention to the subject, except, seemingly, the controllers of affairs at Washington.

The embarrassments which are to be soon felt here by the want of commerce on the Mississippi must accumulate. The greatest amount of administrative ability has been demanded in New-Orleans to feed the thirty thousand poor which the Government inherited from rebel rule. Gen. BUTLER found this obligation the most difficult to fulfill, but he mastered the responsibility by issuing his celebrated Order 45, in which he levied some three hundred thousand dollars on the rich cotton brokers and others, who had been most instrumental in sustaining the rebellion, and inaugurating the reign of suffering among the industrious poor. With the money thus obtained, he managed, at an expenditure of nearly twenty-three thousand dollars per week, to keep the poverty-stricken poor from starving. It was under the stimulus of this desire that he opened the market, and organized the system of labor that kept the streets clean through the Summer, dug out the canals used for the drainage of the city, and increased the river front by adding vastly to the battures. To feed their people was the primary object, and to make it possible for the healthy and strong to earn an honest living, he instituted the labor—but, under any circumstances, he acknowledged the necessity of feeding their people; the beginning of the end of this obligation was to date from the opening of the Mississippi, and the obligation was to end with the resumption of trade with the great West. It is easy to perceive how long off are the ameliorations of trade; the hungry suffering cannot, however, long remain—in fact, daily increases in clamor and swell in magnitude of numbers.

Gen. BUTLER mastered the subject in the shortest way, viz., making the truly responsible—the men who advised the planters not to send cotton to New-Orleans, and thus ruined the city—making these men contribute a small per cent. of their gains to support the poor they created; and for this he has been howled at and abused, and it was the conversation and complaints of these men thus overtaken by retributive justice that gave Reverdy JOHNSON such a fearful idea of the oppressive character of Gen. BUTLER'S rule in New-Orleans. Had he (JOHNSON) gone among the Union men, or the laboring Union men, he would have received very different impressions. Gen. BANKS, no doubt acting under instructions, has attempted, as his subordinates seem to desire, to "soften the rule." The soothing system is to be tried, but look at the result. The blessings of this new state of things only affects favorably the stiff-necked rebels, while the real worthy people of the city are more or less sacrificed. If the wealthy Secessionists are to be cajoled into a love of the Union by courtesies from the National authorities, then it follows that the United States Treasury is to be taxed to feed the poor of New-Orleans, or they are to be left to starve. The United States Treasury is at present taxed enough, and that resource is cut off. The poor, if left without food—obtained either as a gift, or as the reward of well-directed industry—will soon become discontented and revolutionary. Those very rich are to be soothed, Secessionists will at once take advantage of these poor, disaffected people, to tell them that their sufferings are owing to the National authorities; and starting with this poison, they (the desperate poor) will soon be as rebellious and difficult to control as they were when our troops, in May last, took possession of the city.

This new rule socially, I will admit, gives quite an air of relief to our Union officers in high positions. If they will consent to entirely emasculate themselves of all Union proclivities, and make their entire associations among people who, at best, only conceal their hate for the Union, they may yet arrive at such a state of popularity that they will be invited by professed rebels "out to tea," and the young ladies who are so lavish of their attentions upon the officers of the French, English and Spanish vessels in port, might condescend eventually to let even Yankees have a back seat in their parlors, it being understood, however, that said Yankees would allow said young ladies to abuse the Union, Union officers, and play on for the thousandth time in one evening, the stale old Scotch song, set to new words and christened the "Bonnie Blue Flag." And this is the way that these people are to be brought under the benign influence of the "Star and Stripes." Holding an umbrella over a duck in a May shower is well-directed philanthropy compared with this "bosh." If we are never to be in earnest, if the people who have always been for the Union, have suffered for the Union, and would willingly in a fair fight die for the Union, are not to be honored by Union officers and the Union Government, above these smooth-tongued, treacherous, rebel-despised individuals, then let us abandon the contest at once, beg pardon of the myrmidons of JEFF. DAVIS for having been at all disagreeable, and end a contest which is either to put down a rebellion, or end as one of the most solemn and dreadful farces that ever marred the pages of history.

The enemy is quietly strengthening Port Hudson. The roads crossing in from the country leading to the bluffs have been, in some instances, fortified back for several miles, and there is nothing but a series of rifle-pits everywhere defending the approaches. There is nothing here on our side that can make any impression on this stronghold after another month is past. The relief of Vicksburgh has enabled the rebels to reinforce Port Hudson; and in accordance with JEFF. DAVIS' Proclamation, the whole strength of rebeldom will be directed to those points—the idea being mainly to disgust the West for being compelled to send its produce to the East, and thus be made entirely dependent on a Northern and Eastern market. There is a malicious and diabolical smartness about this that is quite worthy of the devil, who is the chief of rebels, and it may have its effect. One only consolation is left me: both Vicksburgh and Port Hudson are situated on bluffs and on bends in the river, opposite to which are low sandy points: the river is now most rapidly rising, and it is within the possibility of human agency and the Mississippi current to turn the river below these fortified points by making artificial cut-offs. By these means, most likely both places will be eventually put back in the country, and be so far out of the way that they can do no harm to navigation. The effect of thus novel carrying strongholds would be good on commerce, inshortening the distance of the route; for every cut-off brings St. Louis, in the way of navigation, nearer to New-Orleans.

AN INTERESTING DECISION.

From the New-Orleans Delta, Jan. 27.

The following decision, delivered on the 24th inst., in the Second District Court, presents a point of considerable interest to persons in any way connected with "Confederate" contracts. The case is of itself peculiar, as the defendant, we learn, presented a claim upon the United States for making the sails, after their seizure by the officers of the Customs:

Patrick McGuigin vs. John O. Chiglivich.—No. 19,164—Second District Court.—This plaintiff claims judgment on a note for $1,000, given on the 18th of February last, and payable sixty days from date.

The defence is, that the consideration of said note was certain sails and canvas furnished to, and work done for, the Confederate Government for the equipment of certain gunboats to be employed against the National Government; that the Confederate Government has never paid respondent for said work and said furniture of the gunboats.

The evidence clearly shows that the respondent was a kind of contractor for this work, and that he used the services and goods of plaintiff in the supplies furnished.

The contract was not simply an immoral one, but one of a highly criminal character. It was one which can be scarcely sanctioned by a Court reverencing, and subject to, the laws and Constitution of the United States. And, inasmuch as treason is the highest crime known to the laws, the contract in question, akin as it is to treason, must meet the disapproval of the legal tribunals. So much for the contractor's part in this matter.

For the plaintiff, the furnisher of the canvas and work, it appears from the evidence that he was well aware of the purpose to which his property and labor were to be put. He was part and parcel of the entire transaction, having received, as it appears, a large portion of the price, amounting to some thousands of dollars, there remaining only this balance unpaid. It matters little whether he was a partner in the contract, or whether he supplied the means for carrying it forward. Their association in the advancement of a work striking at the basis of society, its avowed objects the destruction of the Government of the country, was not only criminal, but the very essence of criminality. Courts of the United States and of Louisiana are not open to litigations of this kind. (Whitesides vs. McGrath, 13 Ann., 401.

The defendant claims that the Confederate Government has not paid him as contractor, and argues from this that plaintiff cannot recover.

Under ordinary circumstances the Court might consider a plea of such kind worthy of some regard, that is to say, had this defendant made either a legal contract, or one with any legal entity entitled to the name of a body corporate. But in this case these qualities are clearly wanting. This contractor can never enforce his contract for want of a legal party defendant. The John Doe vs. Richard Roe system has no existence in our law. Our jurisprudence admits only of real parties.

It is plain that neither party in this case has any standing in this Court.

Let there be judgment for defendant.

Affairs at Yorktown—A Guerrilla Fright at Williamsburgh.

YORKTOWN, Monday, Feb. 2.

Nothing has transpired here of importance. On Tuesday some excitement prevailed, from the intelligence that our pickets had been driven in at Williamsburgh, and that the enemy was approaching in force. But it proved only to be a raid of guerrillas. They turned, at the approach of our forces, and were soon off toward Richmond.

Lieut.-Col. YOST, of the One Hundred and Seventy-ninth Pennsylvania, left here for Harrisburgh, Penn., to-day, to bring on reinforcements for that regiment.

All is harmonious in this Department.

OUR FORTRESS MONROE LETTER.

National Officers Held Prisoners by the Rebels—Affairs at Suffolk, &c.

FORTRESS MONROE, Sunday, Feb. 1, 1863.

The flag-of-truce boat Henry Burden, bearing Lieut.-Col. LUDLOW, Chief of Staff of Gen. DIX, arrived last night from City Point, on the James River. Col. LUDLOW held renewed negotiations with Major OULD, rebel Commissioner, with regard to the exchange of officers and citizens still held by the rebel Government, in defiance of the cartel. Capt. J. E. MULFORD left this morning for City Point in the steamer New-York, to bring down the remaining captured privates of the Murfreesboro fight, including perhaps citizen prisoners, whom the Confederates have agreed to liberate. The question of officers given taken before the 13th January, still remains in abeyance, but will soon be arranged. Increasing opposition is being manifested in the rebel Congress to DAVIS' decree in the Proclamation of 12th January, delivering to Governors of States all officers captured after that period. By a large vote the question has been referred to the Judiciary Committee.

It was reported last night at Suffolk that PRYOR and his troops have returned to precisely the same spot from which our troops dislodged them on Friday. There is no truth in the telegraphic report from Washington, in the papers of yesterday, that Gen. PECK had been told in an interview with PRYOR, that we had gained a victory at Savannah. Gen. PECK has not met PRYOR, nor has he received any communication from him to that effect. N.

At the charter election here, to-day, FREDERICK LEWIS, Union, was chosen President of the village, by 137 majority. Three Union and three Democratic Trustees were also elected.

IMPORTANT FROM ALBANY.

Ex-Governor Morgan Elected U. S. Senator.

Gen. Dix Receives a Complimentary Nomination from the Assembly.

MR. CORNING THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Feb. 3, 1863.

The statute day for the election of the successor of PRESTON KING in the United States Senate brings with it its high duties and scenes of interest. The two parties having in caucus nominated Messrs. MORGAN and CORNING respectively, the first proceeding on the part of each House is to make a nomination according to the forms of the statute. In the Assembly the evenly-balanced state of the two parties, and the understanding that Speaker CALLICOT will vote for neither of the gentlemen placed in nomination, but for Gen. JOHN A. DIX—and the crowning fact that without his vote neither of the gentlemen nominated can obtain a majority of a full House—lends to the morning hour extraordinary interest—not to say suspense.

The hour of 12 M. being the time fixed when the House shall proceed to make a nomination, and the regular order of business having been gone through with nearly half an hour prior to that time, the House waits.

One minute before 12 Mr. T. C. FIELDS moves the call of the roll, and the Clerk proceeds to call. I will not say that the object was to have the hour of 12 go by without the special order being announced by the Speaker, be that as it may, while the roll was being read the Speaker arrested the proceeding and announced the special order precisely at 12 o'clock.

The order of proceeding is that as the roll is called each member shall rise in his place, and openly announce his candidate. The roll-call proceeds, and the names of Messrs. MORGAN and CORNING are given till the name of Mr. HUGHES, of Kings, is reached, when that gentleman names Mr. WOOD. The Speaker's name being called, he voted for JOHN A. DIX. The result was—

| | |
|---|---|
| For E. D. Morgan.....64 | For Fernando Wood.....1 |
| For Erastus Corning....62 | For John A. Dix.....1 |

No choice having been effected, Mr. DEAN moves to adjourn, on the ground that the special order had been executed. The Speaker rules the motion out of order, and that the special order must either be postponed by a two-thirds vote, or the day consumed under it. This being the manifest rule of proceeding, Mr. DEAN does not press his motion to a vote or appeal.

At this stage of proceeding a Committee on the part of the Senate appears at the bar of the House and announces that that body having made a nomination, were ready to meet the Assembly in joint ballot.

The calling of the roll proceeds a second time, when all the Union members vote for Mr. JOHN A. DIX—the preference of the Speaker—this being the only way to effect the necessary nomination preliminary to the meeting of the House in joint ballot. The vote stood:

| | |
|---|---|
| For John A. Dix.....65 | |
| For Erastus Corning.....63 | |

JOHN A. DIX was declared to have the nomination on the part of the Assembly, when Mr. REDDINGTON offers a resolution for a Committee to inform the Senate of the fact.

At this point Mr. DEAN moves to adjourn, and the Speaker declares the motion out of order. From this Mr. DEAN appeals, and demands the Yeas and Nays. The decision of the Chair is sustained as the judgment of the House. Yeas, 86; Nays, 34.

The question now recurs on Mr. REDINGTON'S resolution.

Mr. T. C. FIELD moved to lay it on the table, but is voted down largely. The object of the Democrats being to consume time, Mr. DEPEW demands the previous question and the call is sustained. Mr. DEAN places the very last pebble under the wheels of fate by demanding the ayes and nays, when Mr. REDINGTON'S resolution is adopted—ayes 86, nays 37.

Mr. T. C. FIELDS now moves to postpone the special order till to-morrow morning, but there is no use—the House refused 68 to 36.

The Committee having waited on the Senate returned that they had performed that duty, when Mr. T. C. FIELDS wants to know what the Senate said. Mr. REDINGTON suggests that the Senate will soon appear and answer for itself.

And the next moment the Senate appears in the Assembly Chamber, the members rising as they enter, and Lieut.-Gov. JONES taking his place in the Speaker's desk. The formula in such case made and provided is gone through with, when it appearing that the Senate had named E. D. MORGAN and the Assembly ERASTUS CORNING, the Joint Convention proceeded to a joint ballot.

On the ballots being counted the result was declared to be—

| | |
|---|---|
| For E. D. Morgan.....86 | For John A. Dix.....1 |
| For Erastus Corning..70 | For Dan'l S. Dickinson.1 |

Whereupon Lieut.-Gov. JONES declares that EDWIN D. MORGAN, having received a majority of all the votes cast, is duly elected Senator of the United States from this State for six years from the 4th of March, to succeed PRESTON KING, whose term of office will then expire.

The Senate then retires in the order they enter, and the curtain falls on the scene, while the booming of cannon in the immediate neighborhood shakes the Capitol.

It partly rises again. It having been ascertained that the number of votes for Mr. CORNING having been announced at 60, when the number was 70, Mr. SEYMOUR and Mr. WEAVER are appointed a Committee to wait on the Senate for the purpose of having the error corrected.

And then the curtain goes down finally, the lights are put out, and the audience withdraws—in other words the House adjourns.

The success of Gov. MORGAN, as the result of the short and animated canvass for the United States Senatorship, entails no great disappointment, even on those most devoted to rival candidates. As between what, by popular terms, are designated conservatives and radicals, Gov. MORGAN probably can with justice be classed nowhere else than with the former. His course while Governor of the State was in some respects quite at variance with that of the Executives of some of the other States, on questions of grave national import; and though not extreme either way, the opinions he entertains, and the course he will pursue, may without doubt, and with no injustice, be styled "conservative," as that word has come to be understood and applied.

The significance of such a choice at this time, and under the peculiar circumstances surrounding the election, will readily be detected by every intelligent reader. Taken as an indication of the tone of popular sentiment in the State, and especially in the Republican party, Gov. MORGAN'S election is, perhaps, not the least remarkable event of the times. Nor was there wanting noticeable features in the vote opposed to him, indicating, as it did, the inability of those designated as "radicals" to concentrate on any one candidate. That description of strength appears to have been divided mainly between PRESTON KING and DANIEL S. DICKINSON, though Mr. D. D. FIELDS, generally regarded as more peculiarly representing that sentiment, received the lowest number of votes of any real candidate. Nevertheless, I believe I may say that had the choice fallen on either of the other gentlemen voted for, the selection would have been as readily acquiesced in. The canvas, though not without spirit, was singularly free from asperity of feeling.

The Democratic minority were not happy. The supporters and followers of FERNANDO WOOD were frustrated in their purpose of making him the caucus nominee. That piece of machinery was smashed by the Central Regency here. As I intimated at an early day would be the case, the Democratic members from the rural districts utterly refused to be chained to the car of FERNANDO. In this they were sustained by the Regency, seconded by JOHN VAN BUREN and others from the City. RICHMOND, CASSEB & Co., though thankful—that is, thankful as they could be—for the 30,000 majority in the City last Fall, were not sufficiently grateful to confer on Mr. WOOD the nomination in caucus, therefor. Mr. WOOD could command but twenty votes from his own City and Brooklyn, but not a man outside. Nor did the Regency feel disposed to disguise matters or attempt to cover up their tracks: and therefore in the execution of their purpose, they took Mr. CORNING, whose selection, above any other man, has an intentional significance.

In truth, this hit at WOOD is the chief feature of the Senatorial caucus. It was done with peculiar relish, and leaves a sting that will long be felt.

The election of Senator being over, the way for legislation is clear and straight. Few questions claiming legislation will challenge so much interest as that of bounties to volunteers. It is understood that the Senate will perfect a general law applicable to all parts of the State, and with that view in the House, all petitions on that subject will go to the Judiciary Committee.

New-York City, always fruitful in matters for legislation, bids fair to be not less so at this session; and among them, sundry railroad projects will be particularly prominent.

Speaking of horse railways, that for which Mr. FISHER, of Chenango, has given notice of a bill for one from Norwich to Binghamton, on the bum bank of the Chenango Canal, is not the least important of this description of enterprises. Of the practicability of such a road over the route indicated, there can be no doubt; the great value it would be to that region of the State is equally apparent, and its construction would be but the commencement of a system of horse railways between important points and through populous rural sections of the States.

The city is very full of strangers. Among the arrivals at the Delavan House during the last twenty-four hours, are the following:

Maj.-Gen. Pope, family and Staff; Hon. Fernando Wood, Hon. H. J. Raymond, Hon. Horace Greeley, Hon. Dean Richmond, Hon. Ward Hunt, Hon. J. P. Cummings, Col. Geo. Bliss, Jr., Hon. R. A. Loveland, Hon. ### PROCEEDINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

On the first ballot in the Senate, this forenoon, Governor MORGAN was nominated for United States Senator in place of PRESTON KING.

The President appointed Messrs. WOODRUFF, BAILEY and ROBERTSON a Committee on behalf of the Senate, to provide a hospital and an asylum for wounded and disabled New-York volunteers.

Mr. CONNOLLY, on behalf of the minority of the Select Committee, who were appointed to wait upon Gov. SEYMOUR, relative to the disturbances in the Assembly, reported in favor of sustaining the position of the Governor upon that subject.

Mr. TRUMAN offered a resolution declaring that as the Senate were about to enter upon a ballot for a United States Senator, the Senate assert their approval of the Emancipation Proclamation of President LINCOLN as the best means of crushing out the rebellion, and that the Senate also declare the proclamation justified by events, demanded by military necessity, authorized by the Constitution, and that it will command the approval of the civilized world.

Mr. MURPHY moved to lay the resolution on the table.

Motion lost by ayes 8, nays 21.

Mr. FOLGER moved that the resolution be made the special order for Thursday evening next.

Motion lost.

Mr. ROBERTSON moved to make the resolution the special order for to-morrow.

Pending a vote on this motion, the Senate proceeded to nominate a candidate for United States Senator, the hour of 12 having arrived.

The first ballot resulted as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| MORGAN | 23 |
| CORNING | 7 |

Messrs. BELL and FISHER were appointed a committee to wait on the Assembly and inform them the Senate were ready to go into a joint session.

After the nomination of Mr. MORGAN the Senate adjourned.

ASSEMBLY.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

The first ballot for United States Senator resulted as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Morgan.....64 | Fernando Wood.....1 |
| Corning.....62 | John A. Dix.....1 |

No choice.

After the first ballot, Mr. DEAN moved the House adjourn.

The Speaker ruled that no motion to adjourn was in order, the House having made a special order.

Mr. DEAN asked if the Speaker held the House could never adjourn until the special order was finished. Were they to remain in session six weeks. The ruling was evidently wrong, but he should not now appeal from his (CALLICOT'S) decision.

A second ballot was then taken.

All the Republicans changed their vote to JOHN A. DIX, Speaker CALLICOT voting with them to nominate him.

The second ballot resulted as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| John A. Dix.....65 | |
| Erastus Corning.....63 | |

Mr. DIX was then declared nominated.

Mr. REDDINGTON moved that a Committee be appointed to wait on the Senate, and inform that body that the House had made a nomination.

Mr. DEAN moved that the House adjourn.

Speaker CALLICOT ruled the motion not in order.

Mr. DEAN appealed from the decision of the Speaker, and read from the Manual to show that a motion to adjourn was always in order except in certain cases, of which this was not one.

The decision of Speaker CALLICOT was sustained.

Mr. SEYMOUR then presented a numerously signed petition in favor of an appropriation to improve the navigation of the Hudson River.

BILLS NOTICED.

By Mr. TALMAN—To construct a railroad in the town of West Farms and Morrisania.

By Mr. DEAN—To confer the power to grant new trials to the Marine Court.

By Mr. O'BRIEN—To build a railroad from Jamaica to Rockaway.

By Mr. O'BRIEN—To incorporate Mozart Hall.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

By Mr. BROCKETT—To require a more strict verification of the accounts of Sheriffs and other officers.

By Mr. JOHNSON—Concerning the Brooklyn and Central Jamaica Railroad Company.

By Mr. MCCANN—To incorporate the German-American School Society of the Nineteenth Ward, New-York.

Mr. DEAN called up the resolution in favor of a general bankrupt law.

Mr. CHURCH moved to amend by favoring a bankrupt law for the loyal States. He did not desire that Congress or the Legislature should vote for rebeldom.

Mr. VAN BUREN—Does the gentleman (CHURCH) recognize the Union as divided?

Mr. SEYMOUR suggested that the difficulty could be settled by a "proclamation."

Mr. FERAN believed that the amendment of Mr. CHURCH recognized a division of the Union.

Mr. CHURCH did not press his amendment.

Mr. THOMAS C. FIELDS presented a concurrent resolution to present Brig.-Gen. THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER with a sword, and each member of the Irish Brigade a silver medal, bearing the names of the various battles they have been engaged in.

Mr. FISHER gave notice of a bill to prohibit State Banks from loaning money on gold while specie payments are suspended.

Twelve o'clock noon.—The Speaker announced that the hour for the special order, the election of a United States Senator, had arrived.

Messrs. REDDINGTON and DOHERTY were then appointed a Committee on the part of the House to wait on the Senate and inform that body that the House had made a nomination and were prepared to meet the Senate in joint session.

Shortly afterward the members of the Senate, preceded by the Clerk and Sergeant-at-Arms of that body, entered the Assembly.

Lieut. Gov. JONES, called the joint session to order.

The nominations were compared, the Senate having named EDWIN D. MORGAN for United States Senator and the Assembly JOHN A. DIX.

The two Houses then proceeded to take a joint ballot.

The following Tellers were appointed:

Senators FARRAR and GANSON, and Assemblymen DEPEW and SEYMOUR.

The first ballot resulted in the election of EDWIN D. MORGAN as United States Senator.

The following is the vote:

| | |
|---|---|
| Morgan.....86 | Dix.....1 |
| Corning.....70 | Dickinson.....1 |

Lieut.-Gov. JONES then declared that the Hon. EDWIN D. MORGAN was elected United States Senator for six years from 4th of March next.

The joint session dissolved, and the House adjourned.

The Adjourned Democratic Caucus.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

The Democratic members of the Legislature held an adjourned caucus at the Court of Appeals room this morning.

Judge DEAN'S motion, to reconsider the vote declaring it inexpedient to nominate a candidate for United States Senator, was adopted.

On motion of Mr. CORNELL, the caucus then proceeded to an informal ballot, which resulted as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Erastus Corning.....28 | Fernando Wood.....29 |
| Scattering.....18 | |

On motion of Mr. CORNELL, seconded by Mr. ALEXANDER WARD, who stated that Hon. FERNANDO WOOD desired his name to be withdrawn as soon as the caucus should express a preference for some other Democrat, the nomination of Hon. ERASTUS CORNING was made unanimous. Adjourned.

OUR CAIRO CORRESPONDENCE.

Further Arrivals of Paroled Prisoners—The One Hundred and Ninth Illinois—Gen. Buford in Command at Cairo—Cotton Coming—Arms and Munitions Sent Down the River, &c.

CAIRO, Ill., Friday, Jan. 30, 1863.

The steamer Ad. Hine yesterday brought up another consignment of "paroled prisoners," some one hundred and fifty of the Second West Tennessee Cavalry, who were "surprised and captured" by the rebels at Trenton, Tenn., on the 20th of December last. These have been waiting transportation at Columbus for some time. It is a sad spectacle to witness these repeated arrivals of so-called "paroled prisoners." They come to our landing, many of them with downcast looks, all without guns, and evidently feeling the humiliation of their situation. Some are uncharitable enough to think that this is a new-found method of escaping from the hardships and perils of the campaign. The frequency of these occurrences certainly suggests that there is something unsound in Denmark. The treasonable conduct of the ever infamous One Hundred and Ninth Illinois regiment, in deliberately planning a surrender to the enemy, with all their arms, and even going in search of the enemy for the purpose of inviting a pretended attack so that they might go over to the rebels, bag and baggage, has made the public reasonably suspicious of these captures by the enemy. Hereafter the Union regiment which permits itself to be "captured" will have to show a clear record, or suffer the reproach which attaches to cowardice or treason. This Hundred and Ninth Illinois regiment, so disgracefully and justly branded by order of Gen. GRANT, is referred to as "turning traitors in the face of the enemy." Many were traitors, doubly dyed, before they entered the ranks, as the evidence proves. Many, nearly all of them, were known to be of that sneaking order known as "Knights of the Golden Circle," and no doubt took the Government arms, and joined the army with the deliberate purpose of going to the enemy at the first opportunity.

The conduct of Company K, of the same regiment, is in most honorable contrast to that of the major part of the regiment, and their record will be as noble as that of the others is infamous for all time. Their Lieutenant-Colonel, WHEELER, it will be remembered, deserted to the enemy some time before these exposures took place, by way of setting an example to his regiment.

The convalescent troops from below arrive here almost daily. It must take a large number to make good these constant drains upon the ranks.

Gen. N. B. BUFORD has been appointed to the command of this Department. He has been nominated to a Major-Generalship. Brig.-Gen. TUTTLE, who now has command here, it is understood, cheerfully acquiesces in the arrangement, which will place him subordinate to the General, who will have a wider field for his operations.

There are many abuses here which require looking into. Among other things, the citizens of this submerged city in embryo, complain that the military authorities, or Provost-Marshal, monopolize all the revenues of the town, such as licenses for public houses, etc., leaving them nothing for improvements, repairs of streets, and other municipal wants. They have sent a committee to the Legislature asking for examination and redress of grievances. They will no doubt find many ready sympathizers among the copper-heads, but it is difficult to see how they can apply a remedy. Mr. DUBOIS has undertaken the case in the Legislature.

Gen. BUFORD has not as yet assumed command here, and his Staff is not organized.

The favorite steamer John D. Perry arrived from Memphis to-day in 36 hours. She brings a small consignment of cotton, some sick and discharged soldiers, and two or three poor white families, taken on board near Island No. 20. The latter have a large variety of bareheaded children, their flaxen hair flying in the wind, and the clothing—if the miserable tow cloth with which they are covered can be dignified as such—of both parents and children bespeaking the most squalid wretchedness and poverty. One of the fathers of this numerous family stated that he had been waiting for over two weeks for a boat to make a landing near his place, so that he could get away from the horrors and starvation of his position. They are moving into a free State, where labor is honorable, and where poverty does not identify them with the enslaved negro.

Nothing can exceed the desolation which now reigns along the Mississippi below Cairo. Whatever moves on the river comes up; nothing of any consequence goes down except munitions of war. The Memphis boats now land only at Columbus, Hickman and Fort Pillow, while between here and St. Louis all is prosperous. The boats land at a great many places. The boats are generally of a very superior character.

The gunboat Lexington came down from the Cumberland River during the night, where she had been to convoy steamers carrying stores to Gen. ROSECRANS. She left again this forenoon.

The steamer New National has come down from St. Louis, deeply loaded with naval supplies for the fleet. A very timely arrival.

Some two hundred sailors and marines from New-York arrived here yesterday. The most of them will be transferred to the gunboat Lafayette, which is fast having her iron and other work completed, preparat

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

Important Debate in the Senate on the Course of the French in Mexico.

The Cases of the New-Orleans Representatives Reported Favorably Upon.

REJECTION OF THE BANKRUPT BILL.

The Proposed Submarine Telegraph to New-Orleans.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

A communication was received from the Secretary of the Navy, in relation to the appointment of midshipmen, explaining that it was done in accordance with the construction of the act of Congress by the Attorney General.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) presented a petition from the widow of the late Rev. ASTBURY B. FULLER, Chaplain of the Sixteenth Massachusetts Regiment, asking for a pension.

Mr. HARRIS, of New-York, (Rep.,) presented a memorial from the Inspectors in the Custom-house of New-York, relative to compensation; also, a memorial from the importers of saltpetre and sulphur, and the manufacturers of gunpowder, asking for a modification of the tariff on those articles; also, the petition of about one thousand discharged volunteers, asking for the one hundred dollars bounty promised them; and also, a petition in favor of a bankrupt law.

Mr. HICKS, of Maryland, (Union,) presented a petition from the merchants of New-York, for a bankrupt law.

Mr. HICKS also presented the credentials of Hon. REVERDY JOHNSON, elected United States Senator from Maryland for six years from the 4th of March next.

Mr. DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, (Rep.,) from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported a bill to carry into effect the treaty with Great Britain of Aug. 9, 1845.

Mr. COLLAMER, of Vermont, (Rep.,) from the Committee on Finance, reported back the Post-Office Appropriation bill, which passed.

The bill, heretofore reported, to establish a national currency, secured by United States stocks, was postponed one week—Yeas, 26; Nays, not counted.

Mr. FESSENDEN, of Maine, (Rep.,) called up the bill providing a Deputy Register of the Treasury Department. It was amended so as to provide for an Assistant instead of a Deputy Register, at a salary of $2,500; and also to provide for a Solicitor of the War Department, at a salary of $3,000. Passed.

Mr. LANE, of Kansas, (Rep.,) introduced a bill to provide for stopping the pay of unemployed military officers. Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MCDOUGALL, of California, (Dem.,) moved to take up the resolutions, offered by him, relative to the French operations in Mexico. They are as follows:

Resolved, That the present attempt by the Government of France to subject the Republic of Mexico to her authority by armed force, is a violation of the established and known rules of international law, and that it is moreover a violation of the faith of France, pledged by the treaty made at London on the 31st day of October, 1861, between the Allied Governments of Spain, France and England, communicated to this Government over the signatures of the representatives of the Allies, by letter of the 24th day of November last, and particularly and repeatedly assured to this Government through its Minister resident at the Court of France.

Resolved further, That the attempt to subject the Republic of Mexico to French authority, is an act not merely unfriendly to the Republic, but to free institutions everywhere, and that it is regarded by this Republic as not only unfriendly, but hostile.

Resolved further, That it is the duty of this Republic to require of the Government of France that her armed forces be withdrawn from the territories of Mexico.

Resolved further, That it is the duty and proper office of this Republic now and at all times to lend such aid to the Republic of Mexico as may be required to prevent the forcible interference of any of the States of Europe in the political affairs of that Republic.

Resolved further, That the President of the United States be requested to communicate to the Government of Mexico the views now expressed by Congress and be further requested to assist, be negotiated a treaty between the two Republics as will tend to make these views effective.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) objected to the consideration of the resolutions at the present time, or to the opening of a discussion on the relations of this Government with Mexico and France, in the present condition of public business. He thought there was no time for a discussion which at best would be useless. He objected to the discussion, in public, of the relations of this country with France and Mexico. Either these resolutions meant nothing or something. If they meant anything, they meant war—and no common war—but war with a great and adventuring nation; and by no consent of his would a occasion arise, which could only give aid to the rebellion.

Mr. MCDOUGALL thought that it was time that this subject should be brought to the attention of the country. He thought France was already making war. Having been offered all she could ask for, she had been advancing into Mexico with the design of conquering the country. He thought it was the design of France to take possession of the Mexican States; then to extend her conquest further, and going through Lower California to seize California; and still further, by aiding rebellion, and by collusion with the Southern Confederacy, to seize on Texas and the more southern States, and gain control of the Mississippi river. European nations had always drawn great wealth from their possessions in the East and China. Now the richest nation of the earth was a great prize for the nations of the world; and this movement was only a continuation of the policy of France since the days of RICHELIEU. The latest news from France stated that this expedition was expressly antagonistic to the progress of the United States in conquering Mexico; and so France invaded a sister Republic upon our borders and on our weakest side. It was a high-handed outrage, and should meet the condemnation of every one. He referred to the intriguing mission of ALMONTE to Spain and France, with the proposition to establish a monarchy in Mexico, and claimed that this attempt of France was the result of the machinations of ALMONTE, MIRAMON and PADRE MIRANDA. At first, under pretense of procuring the payment of the debts of Mexico, England and Spain were induced to join; but when these Powers saw that France had other and ulterior designs, they withdrew with a protest against the French proceedings.

He commented at some length on the ultimatum offered by France to Mexico, and declared that it was a disgrace to any civilized nation to make such an offer. He then quoted from letters of Earl CORNLEY to Lord JOHN RUSSELL, and of Mr. ADAMS, our Minister at London, to show that they all feared that the design of France was to establish a European monarchy in Mexico—if not even still further designs were entertained on the interests and empire of the United States. And he contended that from all this evidence the ulterior designs of France were manifest. France had no large mineral possessions like other nations, and no colonies fitted for settlements so as to enrich the central State. Hence, her policy had been, for a long series of years, to aggrandize herself by the possession of empire without regard to right. Else, why her uncalled-for attacks on Siam, Cochin China, Africa and other countries? Else, why was ABD-EL-KADER dragged, as were the ancient British Kings to Rome, to be exhibited to the gaze of the canaille of Paris? In the early history of California, large numbers of the disorganized Garde Mobile were sent to California, and they came to attempt to seize the State of Sonora. Are such had been the policy of France since the days of RICHELIEU. The Government and aristocracy of France and England were opposed to our success in crushing this rebellion, because the success of republican institutions was always dangerous to monarchies, and if there was any Government unfriendly to us in this contest, it was France. France needed a cotton country. She could find it in Mexico. Lower California was not very loyal. Many disloyal men had gone to Sonora. To-day very few arms and little ammunition was left in California, and France might seize and hold that State at any time within thirty days. He thought the Government was bound to pay some attention to this. There was no reason why we should be afraid of a conflict with France, or with Spain and England combined. They in California were apprehensive of the designs of France, and he thought that from the course and policy of France there was reason for this apprehension. The Monroe doctrine in regard to foreign interference had been admitted by all nations to be sound and true. The Government was bound to sustain that doctrine, and should sustain it at all hazards. Suppose France would not withdraw her troops from Mexico. Ten thousand troops, sent from this country to aid the Mexicans, would drive the French army into the sea. If necessary to go to war, this Government would do it in order to maintain a great fundamental doctrine and maintain our honor. If anything could now bind together this nation, it would be a just and holy war against a foreign foe. He believed that many of those, now fighting against us, would turn and join hands with us in a common cause against a common enemy.

Mr. SUMNER was willing to bring everything to the touchstone of the suppression of the rebellion. He would vote for nothing now to add to the burdens of the Government and give aid to the rebellion. The adoption of these resolutions would invite war from a great and powerful nation and give so much aid to rebellion, by bringing it a powerful ally. He would not attempt to follow the Senator's argument. He would say nothing of France, whose friendship he would do all to preserve, and he could not follow the policy of the Senator, which would necessarily bring upon us the hostility of France. The Senators were, indeed, justly sensitive at seeing the return of European empire on this continent. But the most effectual means of preventing this was by the suppression of this rebellion. He moved to lay the resolution on the table.

Executive session. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) from the Committee on Elections, made a favorable report on the credentials of Messrs. BENJAMIN F. FLANDERS and MICHAEL HAHN, as Representatives from the First and Second Congressional Districts of Louisiana. Laid over for future consideration.

The House took up the Bankrupt bill. Several gentleman expressed a desire to address the House on the subject, and others wished to offer amendments.

Mr. ROSCOE CONKLING, of New-York, (Rep.,) who reported the bill, and who has charge of it, said its details could not enter into the vote, which must depend upon its principle. He, therefore, asked that it receive a square vote, and urged prompt action.

Mr. KELLOGG, of Illinois, (Rep.,) moved to table the bill. Agreed to—62 against 61.

Mr. ROSCOE CONKLING, who had changed his vote to the affirmative for the purpose of enabling him to move a reconsideration of the vote, made that motion accordingly.

Mr. KELLOGG, of Illinois, moved to lay Mr. CONKLING's motion on the table, which was decided in the affirmative, by seven majority. So the bill was rejected.

On motion of Mr. SHEFFIELD, of Rhode Island, (Union,) the bill to expedite the collection of the revenue in New York by the appointment of an Assistant Collector, was tabled.

The resolutions reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, declaratory of maritime rights, were postponed until the third Monday in February.

The House passed the bill to incorporate the Washington Theatre Company.

Mr. MCPHERSON, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) reported from the Committee on Military Affairs a bill authorizing the President to select from the Pay Department, or from additional Paymasters of volunteers, without regard to rank, but solely as to qualification, a Paymaster-General, who shall have the pay, rank and emoluments of a Brigadier-General.

Mr. MCPHERSON said that the bill involved no additional expense, and was intended to place the Paymaster-General on a rank with the other heads of bureaus.

Mr. BIDDLE, of Pennsylvania, (Dem.,) was not prepared to vote for it, understanding that the object was to oversleigh Col. ANDREWS, one of the best, most eminent and incorruptible men in the country.

Mr. WASHBURN, of Illinois, (Rep.,) took a similar view. Col. ANDREWS had served his country forty years, and was entitled to the place in order of promotion. His character could not be challenged.

Messrs. OLIN, of New-York, (Rep.,) and MCPHERSON severally explained that the regular army was a mere fragment compared to the volunteer forces. No blow was intended against Col. ANDREWS. But the President should have power to select the best man for the position. Congress had already recognized the principle.

The bill was rejected, 61 against 70.

Mr. OLIN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back, with amendments, the Michigan and Illinois and New-York Canal bill, which provides for the transfer of the Illinois and Michigan Canal to the United States; Commissioners to be appointed, with authority to enlarge the canal for the passage of gunboats and other boats, &c.; the improvement to commence, &c., after the plan shall have been approved by the President and Secretary of War: the work to be given to the lowest bidder; the revenue derived over and above the expenses of management and repair to be paid into the National Treasury to reimburse Illinois for the expenses that State has incurred, and toward the payment of the principal and interest on the expenditures after the enlargement is paid for; the canal to be forever open and free to navigation for citizens of the United States, subject only to such tolls as may be necessary to keep the canal in repair and pay for its management; the Government of the United States to assign to Illinois on her transferring the canal $13,566,984 in six per cent. bonds, the interest payable semi-annually, redeemable in twenty years, to be reimbursed by the tolls; provision also being made for the enlargement through the New-York Canal Commissioners of the Oswego and Erie Canals, to afford passage for armed vessels, &c., from the Hudson River to the Erie and Ontario Canals, the Government to appropriate three millions and a half of similar bonds.

Mr. HOLMAN, of Indiana, (Dem.) raised the question that as the bill contained an appropriation of money, it must receive its first consideration in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The Speaker admitted the point to be well taken, and was sustained by the House by a vote of 93 against 36.

Mr. OLIN then moved to recommit the bill to the Military Committee.

Mr. HOLMAN contended that after the ruling, the bill must go to the Committe of the Whole on the State of the Union.

Mr. OLIN's motion was agreed to by yeas, 64; nays, 59.

Mr. OLIN, from the Military Committee, reported a bill authorizing the Secretary of War to cause to be constructed and laid down a submarine cable from Fort McHenry or Fortress Monroe to Galveston, touching at Fort Macon, Port Royal, Fernandina, Key West and Fort Pickens, with branches from the last-named to New-Orleans, or so much of the military line as the military exigencies may require, the Secretary of War to enter into a contract with such responsible parties as may give security for the prompt and faithful execution of the work.

Mr. OLIN caused a letter to be read, from the Secretary of War, in which he says the distance is 2,500 nautical miles; that a responsible English firm are willing to undertake the contract and guarantee success, on the payment of two hundred pounds sterling; that all the Departments of the Government recognize its importance; that the work should be put under immediate contract, and that the work can be finished in four months.

Mr. OLIN, in answer to an inquiry from Mr. ELIJAH WARD, of New-York, said that it was proposed to give the Secretary of War power to enter into a contract with any persons who can most expeditiously execute the work.

Mr. WARD, of New-York, (Rep.,) preferred that some American should undertake the work. He understood that telegraph cables could be made in the United States as good as they could in England. The work should be open to competition.

Mr. OLIN said that if the line had been in operation a month ago, the Government would have saved four times its cost.

Mr. WARD moved to lay the subject on the table.

Motion lost, by yeas 46, nays 68.

Pending the question on the passage of the bill, the House adjourned.

CAPTURE OF STONEWALL JACKSON'S CHAPLAIN.—Among the prisoners recently captured at Middlebury by Col. Sir PERCY WYNDHAM, was the chaplain of STONEWALL JACKSON'S staff, a Methodist preacher of great talent and cleverness. He is a relative of the RANDOLPHS, and could, if he would, beyond doubt, give us a correct view of the rebels' plans and operations in future than any prisoner of war we have lately taken. He assured a friend here, good-naturedly, during his breakfast at the National this morning, that the whole word of the rebel States was "conquer or die," that the last chance of a reunion was destroyed; and that the recent speech of Jeff. DAVIS, (known here as the "hyena speech,") was heartily indorsed by men, women and children. While he did not attempt to conceal the deficiency of clothing and equipments among the rebel forces, he consoled himself with the pious belief that Providence, who fed the children of Israel with manna, would furnish food and clothing. The negroes, he says, never were so subservient as now, owing to the strict police measures that had been adopted and to the circulation of the accounts of returned "contrabands," who told fearful stories of the cruel manner in which the Yankees had treated them.

EDMUND RANDOLPH, rebel Ex-Secretary of War, will probably be elected Governor of Virginia, in place of LETCHER, and, notwithstanding the deficiencies and privations, both in the camps and homes, there never has been a more defiant, unconquerable spirit among troops and people than now.

After having breakfasted, the Reverend gentleman was taken to the War Department, where he expected to be at once exchanged.—Washington Republican, Jan. 30.

FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES.

Correspondence Between M. Mercier and the French Foreign Office Relative to American Affairs—Object of the French Minister's Visit to England.

The Courrier des Etats Unis receives from its Paris correspondent so much of the Annual Publication of the Diplomatic Correspondence, made by the French Foreign Office, as relates to American affairs. We obtain from this summary, aided by some translations in the London Telegraph, enough to furnish an idea of the general drift and direction of M. MERCIER's labors during the past year.

The report of M. THOUVENEL, preceding the correspondence, states generally the attitude maintained by the French Government toward the American. We extract:

"The year just ended has unfortunately produced no solution of the crisis through which the United States are passing. The struggle is carried on with alternations of successes and reverses which threaten to be eternal. At the same time the sufferings imposed on other countries by the blocking up of one of the most productive countries in the world are being multiplied and aggravated. As far as we are concerned, the distress felt by our cotton industry is well known.

"The Emperor's Government, therefore, watched with increasing solicitude the course of the events which had already attracted its serious attention during the past year. It was especially anxious to conciliate the maintenance of a friendly neutrality with the duty of protecting its own countrymen, which every day became more imperative.

"It has not neglected any one of the opportunities which authorized it to explain its opinions to the Federal Government on the dangers and difficulties of the situation; but while speaking with all sincerity, it was certain to give its observations the most friendly form, and it is happy to say that full justice has been done to its sentiments at Washington. After having, till quite recently, confined its communications with the Federal Government to a kind of confidential exchange of ideas, circumstances induced it to believe that the moment was come to try a more decided step.

"It thought that after two years of so disastrous a struggle, the season when military operations are of necessity suspended could not be suffered to pass without some effort to turn it to the advantage of peace and compromise.

"The Emperor's Government was desirous not to act alone. It, therefore, proposed to the Russian and English Governments to join it, so that together they might bring about an armistice for six months between the Federal Government and the Confederates of the South. The answer of the two Courts is already known. While declaring that they shared the feelings which had led us to make the proposal, they declined coming to the understanding suggested.

"We certainly regretted this determination; but we were conscious of having obeyed the dictates of humanity and sound policy. We are convinced that our proposal, presented collectively, might have contributed to prevent useless bloodshed, and to hasten the moment of reconciliation, the conditions of which were, of course, to be left entirely to the free choice of the belligerents.

"There is evidently no sufficient ground for us to resume alone the initiative of a project which, as we thought from the first, ought to be undertaken with the concurrence of our allies; but we have taken care to let it be known at Washington that we were quite ready, if it should be desired, to facilitate, either alone or collectively, in any form that might be indicated, the work of peace in which we had wished Great Britain and Russia to join us."

The correspondence extends over fourteen columns of the Moniteur. Its two leaders are BUTLER and Mediation, or Mediation and BUTLER.

A dispatch of M. THOUVENEL, dated March 6, 1862, inquires of M. MERCIER whether, after the recent success obtained by the Federal arms in Kentucky and Tennessee, the moment has not arrived for the Washington Cabinet to examine "if the exclusive method of coercion is, after all, the best for remedying the evil already done, and that which can be easily foreseen if the war be continued." All Europe will with satisfaction see the Federal Government seeking itself the basis of some transaction destined to drive away (conjurer) all troubles, and avoid further complications, "which will too early arrive during the present crisis if its prolongation would render more heavy than they are already the sacrifices suffered by commerce and industry in Europe."

M. MERCIER replies to M. THOUVENEL, March 31, 1862, that, according to his instructions, he had held an interview with Mr. SEWARD, and was awaiting the news of the fate of New-Orleans. The French Minister afterward reports a conversation which he had held with influential personages, and who, in answer to his remark that the war increased daily the bitterness between the North and the South, said: "We do not expect to reunite (rallacher) the South with us against its will, but we hope that after having relieved it from the influence of its present leaders, and having given it a severe lesson, it will return to the right path. We are resolved to carry on the contest to the end, and if afterward the majority of the States persist in a separation, we will let them have it." Mr. MERCIER believes that this is the ruling opinion in the North; that the mass of the public is beginning to get tired of the war, but that its conservative instinct still binds it strongly to the Union, and which it hopes to see preserved by a melange of victories and concessions.

A dispatch, bearing date April 13, throws a little light upon the journey undertaken to Richmond by Baron MERCIER, and which created much excitement at the time. It appears that he undertook it at the suggestion of Mr. SEWARD himself, who then believed in the speedy reëstablishment of the Union, and without having previously informed the French Government of his intention. Before his departure M. MERCIER came to an understanding with Lord LYONS, and repeated to Mr. SEWARD that the object of his journey was not connected with the recognition of the South, but only an attempt to bring about an arrangement. The Secretary charged him to state at Richmond that the North was actuated by no sentiments of revenge, and that great satisfaction would be afforded to the inhabitants by the signal of such Senators as the South might consent to send.

Of the many conversations which M. MERCIER mentions having had at Richmond with several important personages, that with Mr. BENJAMIN deserves to be noted. That gentleman said that the South had reckoned too much upon Europe and the power of the commercial interests in suspense; but that, nevertheless, the whole population was unanimous in desiring a separation. The South had suffered much, but was resolved to suffer still more to reach that goal. "We do not dissemble from ourselves," added Mr. BENJAMIN, "that the Federalists are possessed of resources much more considerable than ours, and that they may in the end gain possession of all our ports; but if they take our cities, they will only find therein women, children and old men. In the War of Independence, the English were at one time in possession of all the cities situate on the seaboard; but, for all that, they did not succeed in carrying the day. The situation is precisely the same. The North combats as England did formerly, to preserve her supremacy, and we to conquer our independence," &c.

But we give the actual words:

"I told Mr. BENJAMIN (writes M. MERCIER) that the object of my visit was simply to learn for myself the real state of affairs, and that I came to ask his aid in attaining it. He replied that he would assist me with the greatest pleasure, and that he would be charmed if I arrived at the truth, which, according to all he could gather, appeared to be little known in the North.

"I give you a summary, M. le Ministre, of what Mr. BENJAMIN said to me, and what I have learned from different conversations held while in Richmond: 'We have (I was told) relied too much on Europe and the power of commercial interests; but, however that may be, you will be convinced that we are determined to conquer our independence at all hazards. On this point the sentiments of our people are unanimous. They have already suffered much, but they will endure far more, if necessary, to accomplish their object. We do not disguise from ourselves that the Federals possess infinitely superior resources, and the command of the ocean; that they may, in the long run, make themselves masters of our ports. But in capturing our cities they will find only women, old men and children. The whole population capable of bearing arms, will withdraw into the interior, beyond the reach of gunboats, and, in presence of such a resistance, the North will be obliged to yield. We remember that, in the war of independence, the English momentarily held possession of nearly all the cities on the coast, but succumbed, notwithstanding. The same result will now occur. The present situation is exactly similar to what it was then. Like the English the North fights to retain its power and wealth, and we, like the Americans, fight for independence. Our people are to-day animated by unmistakeable sentiments. Look at the women; they are foremost in urging their husbands, their sons their brothers, to take up arms. By their habits, our people are better prepared for a military life than those of the North, and, on equal terms, our troops have always had the advantage. Our measures are taken to hold Richmond as long as possible, and if, at last, we should be driven from Richmond, Virginia, it would be certainly a heavy loss for us, but we should not despair. Moreover, we can, if absolutely necessary, defend ourselves, by the North cannot attack us without money. On the other hand, we will not hesitate an instant to burn our cotton and our tobacco rather than permit them to fall into the hands of the enemy.

"I have met here every important public personage, and all have held the same language, and expressed to me the same sentiments. Among these persons many are known for the moderation of their character, and for their opposition to secession at the outset of the quarrel. The question now arises whether the determinations so unanimously expressed to me are strong enough to resist every trial? I cannot attempt to decide, but I see many reasons for not doubting their perfect sincerity at this moment. How, otherwise, could be explained the entire submission with which the people accept all the miseries to which circumstances condemn them?

In the following dispatch, dated July 28, 1862, M. THOUVENEL shows himself still more excited (emu) by the duration of the war, the afflictions of which had for Europe just been aggravated by the adoption of the new tariff, which was almost equivalent to closing the United States market. France has persisted in maintaining the strictest neutrality, "but it is impossible to dissimulate that no Government can remain indefinitely deaf to the complaints arising around it, when these complaints are the echo of the general sentiment of the country." "Now, it is easy to perceive," says the Minister, "that the necessity of a solution of the American conflict appears each day more pressing, while at the same time the clearest minds of Europe tend more and more to doubt the possibility of a reëstablishment of the Union to its former condition. * * * * It would be an error to suppose that an unfavorable spirit (un sentiment peu bienveillant) toward the Federal Government at all induces this opinion. No one desires separation, but, convinced that it is inevitable, it is desirable that it should be made under relations the most favorable to the ulterior relations of the two States to which it will give birth."

This dispatch, in which M. THOUVENEL gave his clearest impressions on the issue of the war, was met by another dispatch from M. MERCIER, dated the 15th of the same month, in which the writer "does not think it a piece of temerity to suppose that the hour of peace may not be very far off," comparing the arrangements then existing with those of the present year, and he asks whether "this is not the moment when European mediation would be a great good, and supported by public opinion?"

The Imperial Government, however, did believe that the auspicious moment had arrived, and on the 15th of September, 1862, M. THOUVENEL asked M. MERCIER to gather together all the information he could on this matter. Later, in a dispatch dated Nov. 6, and signed not by THOUVENEL, but by M. DROUYN DE LHUYS, this latter gave to M. MERCIER a confidential copy of the communication which he had just addressed to London and St. Petersburgh, adding that he "had no doubt as to the benefit to the United States of an understanding (une entente cordiale dure.) and "that he had at least the association in our aims in the efforts of the two great Powers which we believe to be toward the United States animated by feelings as friendly as our own."

Nevertheless, M. MERCIER wrote on the 10th of November, that the then recent elections indicated a change of opinion, a diversity of aspirations, but "seemed to be definitely, and above all in their practical consequences, altogether in opposition to the war to the end." M. MERCIER then believes it "opportune for the French Government to prepare to take some conciliatory steps, which might aid in the reestablishment of peace."

Eight days later—the 18th of November—he said on the same subject, that the essential point to be attained by a mediator, was to prevent the renewal of hostilities in the Spring, because if a new campaign should be then begun, it would be very difficult to arrest it, and the culture of cotton, beginning in March, would be abandoned, so that it would be difficult to say when it would be ever resumed.

But on exactly the same day, Nov. 18, M. DROUYN DE L'HUYS announced to M. MERCIER the refusal of England and Russia to unite in the effort made by the French Government, unknown to its Minister at Washington, though in conformity with his known views. M. DROUYN DE L'HUYS announces that owing to the refusal of the other Powers to act in the matter, France will also abstain, but that "we will remain in the firm belief that the offer of our united good offices would have opened a perfectly acceptable way of hastening the denouement of the present crisis, and we do not abandon the hope of yet seeing others enter into our views."

The last phase of this diplomacy is a dispatch addressed from Compiegne, Nov. 29, 1862, by M. DROUYN DE L'HUYS to Mr. DAYTON, who had forwarded him information respecting the two belligerent parties, at the same time expressing the hope that this information would modify his opinion regarding the equilibrium of the respective forces of the North and the South. M. DE L'HUYS recognizes the fact that the information is calculated to give a good idea of all the resources of the Federal Government; "but it is not the less true," says he, "that, notwithstanding the inequality of numbers and financial means, the conditions of the soil and climate seem to oppose invincible arguments to the progress of the war." "I am pleased," he adds, "to render homage with you to the courage evinced by the Americans on both sides; but even this courage, while exciting the admiration of the world, is in this case only instrumental in rendering the more uncertain the results of battles, and in postponing the end of this disastrous and bloody war." The Minister says that "the reception by England and Russia of the proposal of mediation, prevents us from following out the matter, but that our amicable disposition toward the Americans remain unchanged."

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST.

The Inspection of the Fortifications and Defences of New-York Harbor by Gen. Wool.

Yesterday Gen. WOOL, accompanied by his Staff, Brig.-Gens. ULLMAN and STORMS, and Col. DELAFIELD, Chief-Engineer of the Works, proceeded down the harbor for the purpose of making an examination of its fortifications and defences. The party left Whitehall-slip at 10 A. M., in the revenue cutter G. K. Wisner, which had been especially set apart for the occasion by Surveyor ANDREWS. Civilians were expressly prohibited from joining the expedition, in consequence of the extreme necessity of withholding from the public, at this particular time, any information concerning the strength and progress of the military works. There would be no objection, of course, to the people of the North becoming acquainted with the defences in question, provided the same information was not liable to reach the ears of the enemy.

The first landing was made at Fort Hamilton, the party having reached that point at 11 A. M. Gen. BROWN, the commander of the post, being absent, the stay was necessarily brief, and in a few minutes the cutter was on her way to Sandy Hook. After a satisfactory examination of the fortifications along the Narrows, Gen. WOOL, attended only by Col. DELAFIELD, visited the headquarters of the latter, and was shown the plans of the defences.

The party next proceeded to Fort Richmond, but did not attempt a landing on account of the boisterous weather. At 5 P. M. the cutter arrived at Whitehall-slip, and Gen. WOOL immediately proceeded to his headquarters.

Upon the trip down from Fort Hamilton, a collation was partaken of, Gen. WOOL expressed his gratification at the manner in which the works were being constructed, and felt confident that it would not be long before the harbor would be rendered impregnable. The inclement weather which prevailed in the morning made the first portion of the trip somewhat unpleasant, but did not interfere in the least with the practical accomplishment of the object of the expedition.

The Young Men's Christian Association.

The New-York Young Men's Christian Association was organized some years since, having for its express object the cultivation of Christian sympathy, and watchful care over the young seeking the City to engage in business pursuits. It adopts a broad, catholic base, and admits all evangelical Christians to membership. It forms a centre of wholesome influence, and through its fostering care many an one ready to perish has been snatched from the vortex of ruin.

Young men visiting the city as strangers, need helping hands, and require kind words of counsel and advice. To such the association ever proves a blessing. Respectable boarding houses are recommended, and healthful associations provided. The young need society, and if they do not find that which is good and pure, they will be led to seek those places where the tempter with a smiling face cordially welcomes them. Therefore it is that this association is necessary to correct abuses, elevate the mind, and lead the young out of temptation and into paths of usefulness.

The rooms of the Association are always open, and are located in the Bible House, Third-avenue and Ninth-street. A large and well-ventilated reading-room and a choice library are among its many attractions. Meetings for Christian and social intercourse are held on the fourth Monday evening of each month. An essay is read once a month, and all who desire are at liberty to express their opinions upon the positions taken by the writer. Prayer-meetings are also held at noon, and every Thursday evening.

On Sunday evening an appropriate service is held in some one of the churches. Such as desire to hold religious conversation, in person or by letter, receive the attention of the members. Those that are sick and require attendance are requested to notify the officers, and they will be visited.

The members have been very active in supplying the wants of war-worn soldiers. Services have been held with regiments and companies quartered in and about the City, through their instrumentality thousands of pages of religious reading have been circulated. They have also supplied watchers, for the Fifty-first-street and Bellevue Hospitals. The labors of the watchers, although arduous, have been appreciated, and the officers of the institution where their services have been accepted, join in testifying to the benefits conferred by them. Many a sick soldier has, with tears in his eyes, thanked the watcher, and besought heaven to bless him.

During the months of February, March and April, a fine course of lectures is to be delivered at the rooms of the Association by Rev. Messrs. TYNG, NEWMAN, RICE, DURYEA and others. GEO. WM. CURTIS, Esq., will deliver the first lecture on Wednesday evening, Feb. 4, subject—"Sir PHILIP SIDNEY, or the Gentleman." The mention of these names should secure a good attendance.

As the sight of a fragrant oasis in the desert presents to the weary traveler comfort, consolation and hope, so does this Association present to the young in our midst a pure fountain, where the living waters of truth and morality ceaselessly flow and water every heart. To parents far away, it is a comfort to know that the loved ones are cared for by the disciples of Christ.

Anniversary of the Woman's Hospital Association.

The anniversary of the Woman's Hospital Association was held at the institution, No. 83 Madison-avenue, Saturday morning, Jan. 31, 1863, New-York. Rev. Dr. VANDYKE read a selection, 15th Chapter of Matthew from 21st verse, and made a prayer. Dr. METCALFE, President of the Medical Board, spoke of the present condition of the hospital, and of the benefits that had been bestowed on humanity by the establishment of this institution. The operations necessary for curing and relieving those applying at this place are such as the surgeon, or physician, in general practice, cannot successfully perform. To attain the requisite dexterity or knowledge, it is important that great numbers of cases should be seen, and carefully studied; and this is only possible in an establishment like the Woman's Hospital. So high is the reputation acquired by Dr. SIMS, the former surgeon in charge, that in France, where operations are acknowledged as second to none in the world, the opinion and assistance of Dr. SIMS are eagerly sought by the most eminent men of the profession, in cases presenting unusual difficulties or danger. Since the formation of our hospital many have been restored to health that were considered incurable. The last year over 400 out-door patients received medical and surgical aid gratuitously, besides the free list in the institution. Fifty are attended to each week, from whose homes they could not be spared to remain in the hospital. Each county in the State are entitled to a free patient, and that all may exert individual effort for the better support of the present hospital, and enable the building to be erected for enlarged benevolence and better accommodation, Dr. THOMAS ADDIS EMMET has the charge of the hospital. Many will gratefully remember his kindness and skill in restoring them to health. He has been associated with the institution almost from its commencement.

The Navy-Yard.

The election of Mr. FARRON to the Comptrollership of the City of Brooklyn left vacant the office of Master Machinist at the Brooklyn Navy-yard. Several local engineers were examined to fill his place, but no one answered all the requirements. Mr. CONNOVER, a gentleman who had filled a similar situation at Key West, was sent here, and has entered on his duties. Mr. FARRON was a Democrat, Mr. CONNOVER is a Republican. There are about 400 Democrats and 40 Republicans in his department. He is said to have an idea of equalizing the parties. The following document will explain the rest of the business:

SIR: This letter is sent to you who are workmen in the Navy-yard. If you believe in loyalty to your brother workmen, mechanics and laborers, leave the Yard on the very day the abolition boss commences his crusade against operatives for party purposes. The Government for which we work well and hard has ransacked the whole nation to find an abolition master mechanic. Better mechanics by far than he is were examined, but their political principles did not suit Mr. LINCOLN. And all New-York State could not find a man fit for the dirty work of making merit secondary to party. Massachusetts bred the man, and CONNOVER is his name. He tried to discharge 150 men last week, but the Acting Commandant could not sanction such a step in Admiral FAULDING's absence. When that officer returns, the abolition tyrant, who has no thought for the families who he may visit with desolation in mid-Winter, will make his attempt. We have no hope from Admiral FAULDING, because if he interposed for us, Secretary WELLES would come to the rescue. Now, we want you to lay down your tools the day the first large discharge is made, if you should escape the edict of this CONNOVER, who intends to begin by discharging a batch of Democrats at a time, until all are gone. If all hands refuse to work, at once inquiries will be made, the Press will look behind the scenes, and the villainies contemplated may be exposed. In union there is strength. Remember all the fire-sides which may have cause to bless you if you obey.

YOUR FELLOW WORKMAN.

This document is in type and has been sent to a few mechanics and laborers, with the remark that it will be sent to all. Our reporter called on Mr. CONNOVER in relation to it. He said he meant to discharge some persons, for whom he had no work, as there were as many names on the roll now as when 15 ships were undergoing repairs. While denying that he meant to discharge any one for mere party motives, he had no hesitation in saying that the Republicans ought to have a chance now as the Democrats have "ruled the roost" for a long time. There is an impression abroad that trouble will grow out of the affair, and it is said that the whole matter will be laid before the Members of Congress for Kings County.

The Democratic League

There is an association in this City composed of prominent members of the Democratic Party, who are making a bold stand against the demoralizing influence of the peace advocates, and who are doing all in their power to infuse the right spirit among many lukewarm people here at the North. They maintain that this rebellion had its origin exclusively in a long contemplated project of perpetuating Slavery by abrogating a Government of majorities at the South, thus prostrating the democratic principle in Southern politics. Among the Executive Committee are THOS. EWBANK, HENRY O'REILLY, CHARLES P. KIRKLAND and LORENZO SHERWOOD, for many years a resident of TEXAS, whose speech, delivered at Champlain, in this State, last October, was a thorough exposition of the motives which inaugurated our present troubles; and coming from one so long associated with Southern people and politics, gives assurances of the existence of a class there who are favorably disposed toward the maintenance of the Union.

Meeting of the Tammany Society.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED DEPLORING THE LOSS OF EX-MAYOR MICKLE.

On Monday evening the Tammany Society held its regular monthly meeting at Tammany Hall. After reading the minutes of the previous meeting the subjoined resolutions, relative to the death, and eulogistic of Ex-Mayor MICKLE, a former Sachem, were proposed and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Dispenser of all events to remove from the scenes of his earthly usefulness, our Brother and former Sachem, ANDREW H. MICKLE, who had endeared himself to the members of this Society by his worth of character, kindness of heart, and firmness of purpose; his conduct, whether in the pursuit of business, in the private walks of life, or in the distinguished and responsible public station of Chief Magistrate of our City, was marked not alone by the strictest integrity, but equally animated by the most devoted and enlightened zeal in everything conducive to the public welfare.

Resolved, That the Tammany Society or Columbian Order deplores with most sincere and heartfelt sorrow the loss of a brother bound to us by the strictest ties of friendship, whose voice at our councils was always listened to with respect, who won friends by his kind and genial nature and retained them by his worth, whose conduct, ever candid and open, was but the reflection of honorable motives and singleness of purpose, whose firmness was tempered with gentleness and good will to all, and whose career of Mayor of our City has marked him as a composer of the worthiest who have adorned that position; and that while thus expressing our sent est capitalists of Newark are connected with the enterprise.

PAYMENT OF SOLDIERS.—Yesterday Mr. MARCUS L. WARD received $12,000 from the First, and $14,000 from the Second New-Jersey Regiment, for distribution to the families of the soldiers. These amounts make the sum received during the past week from the New-Jersey Regiments reach $100,000, all of which has been promptly paid over. Two thousand dollars has also been sent forward from BEAM's Battery.

A JOKE.—Some weeks ago, "ANNO DOMINI," a well known correspondent of the Newark Daily Advertiser, published in that paper a burlesque life of Stonewall JACKSON. This burlesque, it is stated, was republished in pamphlet form in New-Orleans, being eagerly purchased by the "secesh," who deemed it a veritable life of JACKSON. It was finally suppressed by Gen. BANKS.

MORRIS AND ESSEX RAILROAD EXTENSION.—At at meeting of the Directors of the above Company, held on Monday, it was resolved to proceed at once with the extension of the line to the Delaware River. This step will be a most important one in the history of New-Jersey railroad improvements.

UNITED STATES HOSPITAL, NEWARK.—Yesterday 103 patients, who are permanently disabled from duty, were discharged from the service of the United States.

ESSEX COUNTY COURT.—The criminal calendar has been finished, and the prisoners will be sentenced this morning at 10 o'clock.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.—Nos. 1, 9, 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, on Demurrer Calendar; 276, 277 on Calendar Issues of Law and Fact.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.—Part I.—Nos. 893, 1039, 1221, 787, 2849, 1345, 1347, 1349, 1351, 1353, 1355, 1357, 1359, 1363, 1365. Part II—Nos. 1022, 784, 1218, 1392, 984, 1402, 1412, 1428, 2612, 1430, 1432, 1434, 1436, 1438, 1440.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.—Part I.—Nos. 949, 980, 1119, 1121, 1122, 1123, 1124, 1125, 1127, 1128, 1129, 1130, 1131, 714, 707. Part II.—Nos. 3603½, 795½, 964, 1085, 1087, 1088, 1089, 1674, 1098, 1112, 1114, 1115, 1116, 1117, 1118.

Appeals in Criminal Cases Before Reported.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Judges Sutherland, Clerke and Ingraham.

THE INDIANA BANK FRAUDS.

The People vs. Samuel Hallett.—This familiar case, now on appeal from the decision quashing the indictment, was postponed for the term in consequence of the absence of defendant's counsel.

THE SUNDAY LIQUOR CASES.

The People vs. John Osmers.—This was an appeal from a decision of Recorder HOFFMAN, quashing the indictment in the case on the ground that the remedy was by civil process to recover the penalty, and that it was not a criminal offence. The appeal was argued and decision reserved.

The Case of Stephen H. Branch.—This case of libel will be well remembered. The conviction occurred some years ago, and this was an appeal therefrom.

The District Attorney said that Branch had been bailed by this Court in consequence of an imposition that was practiced upon it. Since then nothing had been done in it. Recently, however, complaints had been lodged against Branch in his office, and he was compelled to revive this case or institute others. He gave notice that he should move to dismiss the appeal on the ground that the papers were not printed. The case went over for the term, the prisoner's counsel being sick and absent.

NEW TRIAL ORDERED.

The People vs. Albert Uhl.—In this case the prisoner was convicted of manslaughter in the fourth degree, about a year ago, he having been charged with causing the death of one William Lee, by shooting. The case was brought up on a writ of error, and a new trial was now ordered.

Appeal Dismissed—The City in Luck.

Clark vs. The Mayor, &c.—This was an action to recover of the defendants the value of a steamboat, sunk in the Harlem River, as alleged, because of certain obstructions allowed to remain therein by the defendants. The complaint was dismissed below, and on appeal the appeal has now been dismissed.

Nonjoinder—Amendment.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Hilton.

Thomas S. Sanford et als. vs. Thomas Crow.—This action was brought in the name of three persons claiming to be heirs-at-law of the late Judge Sanford, and as such, they charge the defendant with the possession of a number of lots on Fifty-third-street, between the Eighth and Ninth avenues, which belong to them as tenants in common. They aver that Crow collects the rents, &c., and their action is to recover for use of occupation, and the demand is for the amount of money received by the defendant from that source.

The defence is a denial that the plaintiffs have title; also, an objection that all the heirs should be made parties to the action—there being three who are not joined.

The plaintiffs now moved for leave to amend by joining the three heirs not named in the complaint as plaintiffs.

The motion was resisted, on the ground that the plaintiffs were guilty of negligence in bringing the action in the name of the three heirs, when it should have been in the name of all the tenants in common, and that they were guilty of laches in not making the motion until eight months after the answer had been served, and at a time when the cause would be reached for trial in a few days. Counsel contended that the making of the amendment sought would render it necessary for defendant to make an entire new answer, and that therefore the defendant would be entitled to full costs. The question of costs was opposed by the plaintiffs counsel.

The motion for leave to amend was, however, granted, upon payment of the costs of motion.

Henry Day, for motion; A. H. Leavey, opposed.

Decisions.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Barnard.

In the Matter of the Application of Bernhard J. Fry, Assignee, &c.; Sargent, &c., vs. Spofford, et al.; Brooklyn Fire Insurance Company vs. Lovejoy, &c.; Conover vs. Bennett, et als.; Leverre vs. Bera et als.; De Locdreas vs. The Same.—Orders granted.

Mebringer, &c., vs. Aldrich et als.; Turner et al. vs. Northrup; Riley vs. Palmer; Livingston vs. Horn et als.; Deboe vs. Van Brust et als.—Motions granted.

Griffin vs. Neill et als.; New-York Fire and Marine Insurance Company vs. Cooley et al.—Judgments ordered.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.

Before Judges Daly, Brady and Hilton.

Thompson vs. Harrison; Richter et al. vs. Marks et al; Bulkly et al. vs. Lord et al.—Judgment affirmed.

Baxter et al vs. Wallace.—Judgments reversed.

Osborne vs. Reynolds.—Judgment reversed as to $24 and affirmed as to balance.

SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Hilton.

Mead et al vs. Dillon.—Motion for attachment denied.

Webb vs. Van Zandt.—Motion to strike out defence denied with $10 costs.

TUESDAY, Feb. 3—P. M.

The speculation in Gold Coin and Stocks has been unusually feverish through the day. The decline in Gold Coin from last night's closing was at one time equal to 3¼ ₱ cent., or from 156⅝ down to 153⅜ ₱ cent.; but this brought in some considerable orders to buy, partly, perhaps, to meet drafts drawn from San Francisco on New-York against Bullion shipped direct to London, and the price took an upward turn, and after various fluctuations between 154¾@156, finally closed 155⅝ ₱ cent., or 1 ₱ cent. lower than last night. Exchange sold at 170@172 for the Boston mail, and was weaker than Gold. Both are affected by the altered financial situation in Congress, and Exchange may have been influenced also by a vague rumor of early Cotton shipments under Government license from New-Orleans. We could find no substantial authority for this rumor, however.

The Stock market was again weaker at the early Board, the list through, with a pretty large volume of business on Erie and Michigan Southerns, and also on Gold, but the demand for the Railways improved toward the close of the list, and at the 1 o'clock Public Board there was decidedly less pressure to sell stocks for cash than yesterday, and this circumstance encouraged a renewed demand, and at rapidly recovering prices later in the afternoon. There was great buoyancy in the regular Board Room before the 3 o'clock session broke up, and the same temper of the market was noticed at the 4 o'clock Public Board; especially on the three New-York roads, Central, Hudson and Erie. The feeling in the Street in reference to the Money market appeared to be better than on Saturday and Monday at the close of the day, although there was again an active demand from the Brokers at 6@7 ₱ cent. The following prices were made at the 4 o'clock Board, the market leaving off firm:

The large shipments of Bullion now making from San Francisco to London direct, in place of New York, are drawn against first upon New-York. We learn that many parties in California remitting to the Atlantic States, for account of their correspondents here, are unwilling to make a rate for currency at San Francisco, and, therefore, take their drafts on New-York payable in Gold; leaving the holder free to settle at the going rate with the banker here, or to take the Gold itself. These drafts are reimbursed on London, but the operation practically works the same as though the Bullion came from San Francisco to New-York to be bought up immediately for shipment to London. The same buying and selling of Gold takes place here in settlement of Gold drafts; the same amount of Exchange is created on London.

MR. WILLIAM S. NICHOLS, late of Messrs. H. A. JOHNSON & Co., of the Stock Exchange, has joined Messrs. HENRY A. STONE & SON in the same line of business. MR. N. has been favorably known on the Street for fifteen years, and the entire period with MR. JOHNSON, and will be an acquisition to the new house. MR. A. F. MILLER, an old member of the Stock Exchange, becomes a partner with MR. JOHNSON on the retirement of MR. NICHOLS, the old style of the firm to be continued. MR. WILLIAM HARMAN BROWN, late with Messrs. BROWN, BROTHERS, & Co., has joined MR. F. B. MULLER in the general brokerage and commission line, under the style of MULLER & BROWN. MR. HOWARD POTTER becomes a partner in the house of BROWN, BROTHERS & Co., in place of his brother-in-law, MR. GEORGE H. BROWN, who retired on the 1st inst.

An important public sale of $600,000 of the Third Mortgage Bonds of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Road will take place on Thursday next, MR. A. H. MULLER, Auctioneer; the proceeds to be applied to paying off a prior Mortgage of $800,000.

The day's business at the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States was as follows: Receipts, $755,877 13, including for customs $250,000; payments, $753,018 17; balance, $6,709,468 39.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Col. WYNDHAM, with a detachment of his cavalry, has made a reconnoissance to Warrenton, Va., and beyond. He surprised the town on Monday night, and while there sent strong patrols to the Rappahannock and Sulphur Springs, which discovered no enemy.

Advices from Key West are to the 29th ult. Our correspondent gives particulars of the capture of the British steamer Pearl and the rebel steamer Virginia, the latter on the coast of Mexico, with a valuable cargo of wines, coffee, &c. Some thirty prizes are now in the harbor awaiting adjudication. The Admiralty Court is very much behind. The ship Sparkling Sea has proved a total wreck, only twelve out of the eighty horses belonging to the Twenty-fifth New-York Battery having been saved.

Two days later advices from New-Orleans are received by the arrival at this port of the steamer George Washington. The only item of importance is the report that the Alabama had been off the Southwest Pass, and had taken a pilot from one of the pilot-boats. The steam frigate Mississippi was at anchor there, on the lookout for her.

Col. STEWART, Chief of Cavalry on Gen. McCLERNAND'S Staff, lately shot by the rebels opposite Vicksburgh, had upon his person when he must have fallen into the hands of the enemy, a memorandum-book containing full estimates of the numbers and calibre of the forces and guns of SHERMAN and McCLERNAND, their available character, their artillery, and everything the enemy should not know, and even the projects respecting the canal, upon which work has been recommenced. At last accounts the water was moving through the canal two to four feet deep, being deepest at the lower extremity. Being dug through stiff blue clay, with slanting sides, there were no signs of its widening. River men think it will be of no practical value. Military engineers do not coincide, and were continuing operations.

Gen. ROSECRANS has issued orders forbidding the issue of passes to civilians to travel south of Louisville, and the fact is naturally taken as indicative of an intention on his part to renew active operations at an early day. Large reinforcements are continually arriving at Louisville, and being dispatched South. Trains are running on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad thirty miles below the former city, and the entire line will be repaired within the coming week.

There are upward of 2,000 rebel wounded at Murfreesboro. Our own wounded there number 2,600.

An examination of the fortifications and defences of New-York Harbor was made yesterday by Gen. WOOL, who was accompanied by his Staff, Gens. ULLMAN and STORMS, and Col. DELAFIELD, Chief Engineer of the works. The party left Whitehall-slip at 10 A. M., and after making a satisfactory inspection of the works along the Narrows, returned to the City, arriving at the slip at 5 P. M.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, after the presentation of numerous petitions, and the transaction of some business of minor importance, the Post-office Appropriation bill was reported back from the Finance Committee, and passed. The bill to provide a National currency, secured by United States stocks, was postponed for a week. A bill was passed providing for an Assistant Register of the Treasury Department, and a Solicitor for the War Department. A bill to provide for stopping the pay of unemployed military officers was referred to the Military Committee. Mr. McDOUGALL'S resolutions regarding the operations of the French in Mexico were taken up, after some opposition from Mr. SUMNER, and Mr. McDOUGALL proceeded to give his views relative to the matter at length. When he had concluded, Mr. SUMNER made a motion to lay the resolutions on the table, pending which the Senate went into Executive session, and subsequently adjourned.

In the House, a favorable report was made by the Committee on Elections in the cases of the gentlemen elected from New-Orleans. The matter was laid over for further consideration. The Bankrupt bill was laid on the table—62 to 61. A motion to reorganize failed—so the bill was rejected. The bill to appoint an Assistant Collector for the Port of New-York was tabled. The resolutions from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, declaratory of Maritime Rights, were postponed until the third Monday in this month. The bill authorizing the President to appoint a Paymaster-General was rejected—70 to 61. The Michigan and Illinois and New-York Canal bill was reported from the Military Committee, but on the objection being made that it contained an appropriation, and should, therefore, go to the Committee of the Whole, it was recommitted to the Military Committee. The bill authorizing the construction of a submarine telegraph along the coast to New-Orleans was reported from the Military Committee. A motion to lay it on the table failed, and, pending the question of its passage, the House adjourned.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, the first business was the nomination of a candidate for United States Senator. Ex-Gov. MORGAN received the nomination on the first ballot. Nothing else of importance was done.

In the Assembly, the first ballot for Senator resulted in no choice—MORGAN receiving 64 votes, CORNING 62, FERNANDO WOOD 1, and Gen. DIX 1. On the second ballot, a complimentary nomination was given to Gen. DIX, he receiving 65 votes. At 12 o'clock the joint session was held, and the first ballot resulted in the choice of Ex-Gov. MORGAN—he receiving 86 votes, CORNING 70, DIX 1, and DICKINSON 1. When the joint session dissolved the Assembly adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

The obsequies of Rev. ROBERT A. QUINN, late Chaplain of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, Staten Island, who was killed on the 31st ult., by HERMAN ENGLE, one of the inmates of the institution, took place in the "Harbor" Chapel yesterday afternoon. Rev. W. W. PHILLIPS, of the First (Fifth-avenue) Presbyterian Church, preached the funeral sermon. The inmates of the "Harbor" were deeply affected on parting forever with their old friend and pastor. The remains will be taken to Hyde Park for interment at 10 A. M. to-day.

The Board of Supervisors met at 3 o'clock P. M., yesterday. Three veto messages were received from the Mayor; one on the resolution to pay $192 for revenue stamps used in the Courts, last year, because no provision was made to reimburse the County. The Mayor thinks the expense of the stamps should be upon the litigants, which was the view expressed in the committee's report, in favor of paying the bill. The second veto was on the resolution to appropriate $4,000 for the Twenty-second Regiment, and $2,500 for the Twelfth Regiment, to fit up their armories, because the former sum is $1,500 in excess of the maximum sum permitted by law for that purpose. The third veto was on the resolution to pay $110 for cement furnished for the new Court-house, the Mayor still holding that the new City Hall Commission, and not the Board, have the right of directing the construction of the building. A request from the Supervisors of Westchester County, for a committee of five from this Board, to act with a like committee of their body, to settle the question of the boundary line between the two counties, was complied with. A resolution, proposing the repeal of the State excise law and the abolition of a special excise law for the County, was referred. The resolution permitting the Police Commissioners to use $25,000 from the surplusage of the appropriations for 1863, to fit up the new police headquarters, was passed over the Mayor's veto. There was a long discussion about the Annual Appropriation bill for the County. The chief point of dispute was an item of $6,033 74, being for interest on claims incurred by services of clerks under the famous Record Commission—this sum being in excess of the $80,000 provided in 1860 for the payment of the claims, after adjudication. Mr. BLUNT feared a personal liability for further claims. Mr. DAVIS explained that a safety provision would accompany the item, limiting payment to claims already judicially ordered. The subject was finally laid over. Adjourned till 2 P. M. on next Thursday.

A large meeting to promote the "new State" movement was held in Wheeling, Va., on Saturday evening last.

Judge LEMUEL J. BOWDEN, of Williamsburgh, Va., has been elected by the West Virginia Legislature to the United States Senate, in place of Hon. W. T. WILLEY, who positively declined to be a candidate for reelection. Judge BOWDEN is a lawyer of distinguished ability, and said to be a loyalist of the most true-hearted character.

The General Term of the Supreme Court, yesterday, had under consideration a number of criminal cases, before reported in the TIMES and familiar to its readers. They are noticed in the law column.

The market for Gold was 3 ₩ cent. lower yesterday morning than the night before, and so was Exchange on London. But the decline in the former brought forward orders to buy and part of the decline was recovered. Stocks, after a dull morning, were buoyant and higher at the close. Gold 155⅝; Erie Shares, 73¼; Exchange dull after the Boston mail closed. The business for the mail this morning was at 170@172 ₩ cent.

Transactions in Domestic Produce and General Merchandise, yesterday, were checked by the influence of the heavy fall and frequent fluctuations in the price of Gold and Sterling Exchange. Flour declined 5c.@20c. ₩ bbl.; Wheat about 2c., and Corn 1c. ₩ bushel, with restricted sales reported. Provisions were less active; prices of hog products favored buyers. Cotton was dull and unsettled. Groceries attracted less attention. A very good inquiry prevailed for Metals. Fruit, Hay, Hops, Oils, Tallow, Tobacco, Wool, Adamantine Candles, Chemicals and Manila Hemp. Whisky was depressed and lower. The Freight market was quiet.

The Live Stock markets have been unusually active this week. The total receipts have been considerably larger than for several weeks previous, but the demand has more than kept up with this increase, and an advance in the prices of all kinds is quoted. A change to cooler weather favors both the consumption and keeping of meat, and butchers, who have during the warm season been sparing in their purchases, are now anxious to lay in a supply against the contingencies of snow-blocked roads, or light receipts from other causes. Beeves numbered 4,640 for the week, of which 3,573 were on sale at Forty-fourth-street, leaving the large number of 1,000 sold at the down-town markets, and purchased by butchers at Albany and elsewhere—400 head are reported sent direct to wholesale butchers. Cattle have sold even better than one week ago, and drovers and speculators still have the best of the market. Choice fat cattle brought 10c.@10½c. ₩ lb., net weight, and several droves averaged over 9c. Everything was sold out, the whole averaging from 8¾c. to 9c. ₩ lb. Some of the cattle came in late, but for once, these sold as well as the early arrivals. Sheep are scarce, and higher than one week ago. Prime lots are worth 7½c. ₩ lb., live weight; some extra fat sheep have been sold for 8c. Live hogs are in good supply, but an improved demand has pretty well used them up. Cooler weather also helps both the retail trade and the packing business. Prime fat hogs, corned, are now selling at 5½c.; light hogs 5¼c., and still-fed 4¾c.@5c.

FALSEHOOD OF A REBEL SYMPATHIZER.—The article in the Philadelphia Evening Journal, for which its editor, Mr. BOILEAU, was arrested, was an article in praise of JEFF. DAVIS' annual message and in depreciation of that of President LINCOLN. It did not merely, however, discuss the comparative literary merits of the two, but was loud in praise of the subject-matter of DAVIS' message, and in as entire sympathy with the rebels as if it had been written in Richmond.

In the course of the article, the editor, after alluding to the speeches which JEFF. DAVIS made, in his recent trip to the West and on his return to Richmond, uses the following language:

"The usual amount of twaddle was indulged in by the Abolition Press, deceiving the people now, as they have in the past, about the desperate straits of the Confederacy, 'the visit of JEFF. DAVIS to restore their drooping courage,' and more of the same sort. THE NEW-YORK TIMES, however, an Abolition paper, which is generally pretty candid, unless engaged in a political campaign, with shrewd foresight and a cutting rebuke at our own Administration, denominated his speeches as 'crushingly truthful.'"

There is not the slightest foundation for this slanderous charge against us. In an article on JEFF. DAVIS' speech to the Mississippi Legislature, we quoted his statement that his failure to transfer the war to northern soil "proceeded not from a want of inclination but of power," and this statement of DAVIS we pronounced "crushingly truthful."

The Philadelphia Secessionist perverted our statement that the truth of this admission of want of power to carry the war North made it a crushing one to the rebels, into a charge that we had admitted the truth of those speeches of DAVIS which were as full of falsehood as an egg is of meat, and that they were crushing to the loyal cause.

We need hardly be surprised at so outrageous a perversion. Lying has been so universally the accompaniment of secession and treason at the South, that we could not expect those who sympathize with treason at the North to be free from that kindred vice also. And that this editor in the same breath should follow BEAUREGARD'S advice, and stigmatize the loyal Press of the North as Abolitionists, is only a clearer index, if any were needed, as to where his sympathies and influence tended.

We hope his residence, brief though it has been, in Fort McHenry, may have proved beneficial not only to his loyalty, but also to his veracity.

A Fair Question for Fair Men.

Will some of the Union men of New-York, who are never tired of croaking about the ill-effects of the Emancipation Proclamation, be so good as to inform us why they should take that Executive act in a spirit so different from that manifested by the Union men of New-Orleans. How happens it that the Unionism of the Southern metropolis so promptly, so heartily, we might say so jubilantly, concurs in the measure, while so much of the Unionism in the Northern metropolis finds it so very hard to acquiesce?

It is useless to attempt a denial of the essential fact. Accounts may differ respecting the actual extent of the Union feeling in New-Orleans, but all accounts agree that whatever there is of it is most decidedly on the side of the Proclamation. Nothing can be more certain than that the public meeting which took place prior to the sailing of the last steamer, crowded the largest hall in the city—that this meeting consisted mainly of native Southerners, and largely of life-long slaveholders—that it was addressed by none but Southerners and slaveholders,—and that it ended by the unanimous and enthusiastic adoption of this among other resolutions:

"Resolved, That we are prepared to sustain the Government of the Union in all measures adopted for the suppression of the rebellion, and that we fully approve the war measure set out in the Proclamation of the President, of Jan. 1, 1863, as one called for by the exigencies of the contest, consummating at once an act of justice to one class, and inflicting at the same time on another class persisting in rebellion, the blow best calculated to reduce them to obedience to the laws."

There can be no more explicit and emphatic approval than this. It goes out to the world as the well-weighed, thoroughly-accredited Union sentiment of the chief city of the South. This high position is taken in face of the facts that no other city in time past has so flourished on slave-grown staples, that no other has at the present time such large amounts invested in mortgages on plantations and liens on slaves, and that no other in future could have become so enriched and aggrandized by the realization of the golden dreams of the Confederacy. It is also taken at great personal risk; for it is certain that such a committal to an emancipation policy would draw down summary vengeance upon all engaged in it, if the Slave Power should hereafter regain sway. We ask again, then, How is it that the Unionism of New-York City, which is comparatively but slightly touched in its material interests by the Proclamation, and which has nothing of a personal character to fear, should be so querulous and timorous about this measure, while the Unionism of New-Orleans is so cheerful and bold?

In our opinion, this phenomenon is owing to two causes—first, to the superior knowledge in New-Orleans of the connection between Slavery and the rebellion; and, second, the surviving influence of party spirit in New-York, which in New-Orleans has ceased to exist.

Nobody can doubt the thorough acquaintance of the leading Unionists of New-Orleans with the essential spirit and practical workings of Slavery in its relations to the National Government. They have spent all their lives in the midst of the system—have been personally interested in it—have observed, with their own eyes, exactly how it generated the spirit of rebellion—and have seen precisely how it has since supplied the rebellion with strength and stimulus. It is not possible that Northern Unionists should have so favorable opportunities for forming as accurate a judgment in reference to this vital matter. We need not wonder, then, that their judgment has not been so accurate. The only wonder is that when they receive this enlightened and explicit testimony from the Unionists of Louisiana—and it is repeated by the Unionists of North Carolina and of Maryland, of Western Virginia and of Missouri—there should be an honest doubt remaining in the mind of a single Union man of the North, that if this Union is to live Slavery must perish.

But there is the old party prejudice to overcome. "It is the most difficult thing in this world," says a modern philosopher, "to emancipate one's-self from the tyranny of association." The North—especially the Democratic Party of the North—have always associated the emancipation of the negro with unconstitutionality, fanaticism, radicalism, Garrisonism, St. Domingoism, and everything they imagined to be illegal, destructive and abominable. All this feeling was formed in the old order of things, and with more or less reason. But the consequence is that tens of thousands of really honest men find it impossible to rid their minds of the old impressions, and to fairly confront the alternative of emancipation or disunion. There is reason to believe that not a few of them would choose the latter when the alternative can no longer be avoided. The Southern Unionists are no longer subject to those old habits of thought. They have been put through fiery trials that have renovated them throughout. The upheaval of society about them has broken off every old connection, and they regard everything about them from a new point of view. They are in a condition to take in the necessities of the present, without any reference to the past; and to adapt themselves, readily and consistently, to the actual demands of the situation. In once resolving amid such trials to maintain their Unionism, they are in no condition of mind to hold back anything which they know to be conducive to the preservation of the Union. All former predilections, all minor attachments, are overborne by this paramount devotion to their country, and full knowledge of the only means of saving it. They thus go straight on without reserve, and without misgiving.

If the two reasons we have assigned—superior knowledge of the relations of Slavery to the rebellion, and superior freedom from party influence and ancient prejudice—are not the real causes of the superior boldness of the Unionists of New-Orleans in sustaining the Emancipation policy of the President, we should like to know how it is to be accounted for. Apart from these reasons, every antecedent probability would have prepared us for a hostility from the Union men of New-Orleans against the Proclamation as intense and bitter as their support of it is now ardent and generous.

United States Senator.

Ex-Gov. MORGAN was yesterday elected Senator in the Congress of the United States, in place of PRESTON KING, whose term expires with the present session. This result puts a very effective quietus on the predictions of leading Democratic journals just after the last election, that they would either elect a Democrat or throw the election over to another year. Gov. MORGAN is a Republican, and if we may judge the future by the past, will continue to act as the representative of that party. At the same time he is a gentleman of enlarged and liberal views, and has seen enough of public life to appreciate the fact that public service is a practical matter, and as such is inconsistent with an obstinate adherence to favorite theories, regardless of circumstances and under all contingencies.

In the caucus of Republicans and Union Democrats by which this nomination was made, the services and fidelity of Senator KING were fully appreciated, and there was a very strong inclination to renew his term. But the State has recently inclined to the policy of a single term for its representatives in the Senate, as more just to the several localities, and to the personal and political claims of individuals. There was a large number of members in the caucus who at the outset preferred some other candidate to Gov. MORGAN; but their unwillingness to waive personal preferences and resentments, and their lack of any common principle or sentiment to control their action, soon gave Gov. MORGAN a very signal and decisive triumph. Their defeat in this as in many other instances may possibly serve to teach some who aspire and claim to be political leaders, that passion is a very poor substitute for policy, and that resentment and revenge form a very unsubstantial basis for party movements.

Gov. MORGAN has served the public one year as Assistant Alderman in this City, two terms as State Senator, and four years as Governor. He has ability and experience in the management of public affairs. He represents what is known as the conservative wing of the Republican party, and though it is not very easy to say what specific distinction of principles or of policy that term indicates, his election is understood to signalize a decided defeat of the "radicals." His election is acceptable to the more loyal and conservative section of the Democrats, and will give very general satisfaction throughout the State and nation.

Minor Military Operations.

A correspondent of the Richmond Whig, writing from LEE'S headquarters on the 29th ult., speaks of the bad weather that set in when BURNSIDE was about to move a fortnight ago, and says that the rain and snow continued up to the time of his writing, and that the snow was then five inches deep, and the roads difficult of passage. The "oldest inhabitant" also told him that Winter, with its accompanying bad weather, had just begun in that latitude. From all of which the writer draws the inference that

"At any rate we can reasonably promise ourselves a respite from BURNSIDE'S military operations, of thirty or sixty days, to borrow the stereotyped diplomatic phrase of Mr. SEWARD in his dispatches."

It is rather unfortunate that this season, during which the rebels expect to be "let alone" in Virginia so that they can employ their army in any other field at which it may be needed, is the very time in which GRANT is about to begin operations against Vicksburgh, and ROSECRANS, apparently, to move against Tullahoma. A prospect, or, as the rebels think, a certainty of three months' inactivity in Virginia, will enable them to ship off twenty thousand men to each of the menaced points, unless we give them work nearer home. Although we have no idea that Gen. HOOKER will remain motionless at Falmouth for the "stereotyped diplomatic thirty or sixty days," yet we think that during that time work may be furnished the rebels by our armies in North and South Carolina, and by our iron-clads. There are several important points in and not far from the Southern seaboard, which lie altogether at our mercy, and which, if once in our hands, would render it a very dangerous thing for the rebels to deplete the Virginia army by sending any great part of it West.

We imagine that Gen. FOSTER will do his share in furnishing the rebels the employment which they need. It is not yet known where the large land and naval expedition with which he left Newbern the other day has sailed to; but we have no idea that he and his expedition will turn up on a sand bar or a sea island. We suspect they will turn up where slaves are pretty thick, and where, if we get a foothold, we can fling a javelin into the bowels, if we cannot at the head, of the rebellion. We hope FOSTER'S expedition may not disappoint us in this respect.

Our Monitors, too, might, we should think, render us good service in their way. We have now two of them on the coast of the farther Carolina, and two or three at or near Fortress Monroe. Their sea-going qualities have been tested, and Commander WORDEN, in a fashion that is highly wonderful, has proved their invulnerability against the rebel batteries. Let some of them be put to work up the Southern rivers, aided by the small land forces now lying idle here and there over the South. In this way, even if HOOKER does not immediately operate on the Rappahannock, JEFF. DAVIS may be prevented from concentrating all his forces for the overthrow of our two armies in the Southwest.

STRENGTH OF THE REBEL ARMY.—One reason for Gen. BURNSIDE'S anxiety to make prompt, and, if necessary, repeated attempts upon the rebel army on the Rappahannock, was the conviction in his mind that the forces had been greatly weakened by recent detachments sent South and West. The following paragraph, from the Richmond Whig of the 21st ult., serves to confirm this opinion:

"The New-York World has a report from a well-informed source that the Army of the Potomac is to be broken up, and the bulk of it sent West—only a small fragment of it to be retained at Washington. This comes of our movements being known to the enemy. If we only had our full forces now upon the Rappahannock, instead of being scattered South and West, we could make short work of the Yankee concern at Washington. But it is useless to cry over spilt milk."

Brooklyn Tragedies.

Brooklyn, take it all in all, is one of the finest cities in the world. Its hundreds of beautiful streets and avenues, lined on both sides with elegant houses, filled and decorated with every luxury that science can invent or art produce; its public buildings, libraries, opera and churches—are the pride of its own citizens and the wonder of traveled Manhattanese. Its people, on the average, probably, enjoy a larger share of the good things of this life than falls to the lot of the denizens of any other city on the globe. They are noted for their refinement, for their culture, for their high morality. They are blessed with golden-mouthed preachers, who, in turn, are favored with vaster and sleeker flocks than any other shepherds of this heritage. Their temples so abound that the city has acquired the designation of the "City of Churches." Their charity is wide as the world. Whoever seeks aid for the people of any continent or clime, turns his footsteps first to Brooklyn, assured that the appeal has but to be made, to be generously responded to.

But, let Brooklyn look for a moment at home. The papers, within the last day or two, have contained notices, terrible and heart-rending, of occurrences in Brooklyn, which we would thus prominently bring to the attention of its citizens and authorities. The dead are dead. The victims of starvation have had their cold inquest, and been buried. For them, nothing now can be done. But those who still live and starve—shall any more of them be permitted to perish with the luxury and wealth of Brooklyn around them? Shall another one of them pass along the streets of that luxurious city, and gazing into its happy homes, "see the light of household fires gleam warm and bright," and then crawl into his cold hovel to die of want? The following are the two items of Brooklyn news we refer to:

Death from Want—An inquest was held by Coroner NORRIS, Thursday morning last, upon the body of a girl 8 years of age, named MARGARET FOSTER, residing in the basement of No. 208 Water-street, who died from want. The Coroner found the place filthy and destitute of furniture. In one corner of the room was an old mattress of straw, upon which the whole family, father, mother, and two children slept. They were nearly destitute of clothing, and there was nothing whatever to eat in the house. They had had no food for two days.

Died of Hunger.—On Sunday last, Coroner NORRIS held an inquest upon the body of a man named HENRY RAPPER, a butcher, who died for want of the necessaries of life, on Saturday night. The Coroner, on entering the apartments, found the deceased sitting upright in his chair. The appearance of the room indicated that the wife of the deceased was an industrious, cleanly woman, but there was evidence of extreme poverty. Owing to a malignant disease, Mr. RAPPER has been unable to work for some time, and thus their income was cut off. A few days since she applied to the Superintendent of the Poor, and asked for a little food, stating that her husband was very ill, and required some nourishment. The inquiry was, "Have you any children?" On answering that she had none, she was told to go to work and earn food. She returned home, and her husband asked for some little nourishment, but she had none to give him. The jury, in rendering their verdict, stated that want of proper nourishment was the cause of death, and that it was a proper case for the authorities to inquire into.

That is only two cases of starvation—that is all. Only two cases within a week! It is shocking—it is inexcusable. Poets may starve in their garrets, too proud to ask assistance, but the average poor do not suffer themselves to starve to death until they have exhausted all efforts to obtain relief, and given up in despair. Who knows the rebuffs that these poor folks may have met with from the time when the sharp pangs of hunger first touched their hearts, till they passed to where "there is no more hunger?"—who but those who have felt it, can tell the deathly effect of being repelled by a cold-hearted official dispenser of alms? The citizens of Brooklyn need no stirring up to acts of personal charity; but, for the honor of human nature and of the City of Churches, we trust they will see that the so-called guardians of their poor be held to some account for these shocking occurrences, and that they will make provision that none other such cases are heard of in their city, while Heaven blesses it with plenty.

THE SENATE ON MEXICO.—We trust that in the discussions on the Franco-Mexican question, which were opened in the Senate yesterday, and which that body seems disposed to entertain, there will be no unnecessary heat displayed, and no false charges made against either of the belligerents. The speech of Senator McDOUGALL, of California, on his Mexican resolutions, was highly unjustifiable. He accused France not only of a design of taking possession of the Mexican States, but of an intention of pushing her conquests further—of going through Lower California and seizing California, and then of seizing Texas and the more Southern States, and gaining control of the Mississippi River. It is, perhaps, no more improper in Mr. McDOUGALL to make such charges against France than it was for the French Emperor to make the charge against our Government of a desire to seize Mexico, and dominate the Antilles and South America. But both the charge and the counter-charge are improper, insolent and offensive. The French charge was the most offensive, in that it was official; but Senators also must remember the importance that is put in Europe upon their declarations.

We do not see that any good can come from extended debate upon Mr. McDOUGALL'S resolutions, considering the form in which they stand and the shape events have assumed. They had as well be voted down at once, and our relations with France be left for the present in the charge of the State Department.

AN IMPORTANT REFORM.—We congratulate the country on the probability of at least one needed reform in the Army of the Potomac. The Washington correspondence of one of our City journals states that Gen. HOOKER is determined to end the régime of "half-loyal, half-hearted, heavy and slow Generals," and that

"those whose spirit, speech and influence tend to produce insubordination and demoralization among the troops are doomed. The efficient officers in the army will now surely come up, and thorough discipline for both officers and men will as surely be enforced—discipline that shall require unquestioning obedience to orders, and abstinence from criticism and from prophecy of disaster."

No man knows better than Gen. HOOKER the effect produced upon an army by harsh criticisms of plans formed by the commanding General, and by "prophecies of disaster" uttered on the eve of important movements. His own experience and observation have confirmed the teachings of common sense on this subject. He cannot fail to have noticed the depressing influence upon subordinate officers and men, of all such censures and denunciations. When a General of Division or of Corps, after receiving orders for an important movement against the enemy, does not scruple to denounce it as certain to fail—as ridiculous and absurd, and as affording proof that the commander has not brains for the authority he is commissioned to wield, he can scarcely expect his subordinates to show much alacrity or enthusiasm in their execution. No man knows this better than Gen. HOOKER; and we are glad to see that he is prepared to administer the prompt and effective remedy which the case requires. It is nothing but the lack of such discipline which has prevented the Army of the Potomac from long ago winning a decided and decisive victory over the rebels in its front.

We trust that Gen. HOOKER will not deem it necessary to go to Washington for "consultation" with the authorities there upon the cases which may arise for discipline under the very just and proper rule he has adopted. If any officer, whether he be commander of a Grand Division, of a brigade or a single regiment, sees fit to set an example of disloyalty and of mutiny to those under him, by needless, false and unmilitary criticisms of the kind referred to, we hope Gen. HOOKER will instantly dismiss him from the service, as unfit to draw a sword in so good a cause—and that, too, without waiting to consult the President, the Secretary of War, or any other officer outside his army lines. Let them revise his action, and take the full responsibility of reversing it, if they see fit to do so. But let him not shrink from the exercise of all the power which he wields, to effect this great and greatly needed reform in the army under his command.

LATEST FROM VICKSBURGH.

ARRIVAL OF GENERAL GRANT.

The Work of Widening the Cut-off Still Progressing.

CAIRO, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

Vicksburgh dates to the 30th ultimo have been received.

Gen. GRANT had arrived.

The work of widening and deepening the canal is progressing. The rebels have planted a battery on the Mississippi shore, which commands the lower end of the canal.

The Richmond Whig, of the 22d, says that LONGSTREET, with thirteen brigades, had gone to Tennessee.

The gunboat New Era was attacked Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, near Island No. 10, by guerrillas, with three pieces of cannon. The boat returned fire with shell. The conflict lasted till near daylight, when the rebels retired. Their force was believed to be between 2,000 and 3,000.

The operator at Paducah reports that the command at Fort Donelson was attacked at an early hour this morning. At 4 this afternoon the engagement was going on. Reinforcements have gone forward.

AN IMPORTANT RECONNOISSANCE.

Warrenton Surprised by Col. Wyndham's Cavalry—Patrols Sent to the Rappahannock and Sulphur Springs—No Enemy Found.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

Accounts from Fairfax Court-house, received to-day, say that Col. WYNDHAM has just returned from an expedition to Warrenton. He surprised the town last night, and while there sent strong patrols to the Rappahannock at Sulphur Springs and Waterloo. These patrols found no enemy at either place. He captured in Warrenton eighty stand of arms, which he was obliged to destroy, having no facilities for bringing them away.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—VERDI'S popular opera "Les Vespres Siciliennes" will be given here, to-night, with an unusually strong distribution. Mr. GRAU'S best artists are in the cast.

GERMAN OPERA.—Mr. ANSCHUTZ having returned from Philadelphia—where his success has been little less than extraordinary—will give, his first performance here to-night. The opera of "Der Freischutz," introducing all the artists, has been selected for the occasion.

ITALIAN OPERA IN BROOKLYN.—Last night, at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Mr. GRAU'S troupe gave, to the entire satisfaction of the most brilliant house we have yet seen at the Academy, the favorite opera "Ernani." LORINI, MACAFERRI, SOSINI and AMODIO were in the cast and very acceptably rendered their respective rôles.

Gen. Burnside in Providence.

VISIT TO THE RHODE ISLAND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Tuesday, Feb. 3.

By invitation of the General Assembly, Gen. BURNSIDE to-day visited that body. Business was suspended, and the General was introduced to the members individually. No speeches were made. The reception was informal, but most cordial and hearty.

Boiler Explosion and Loss of Life.

BALTIMORE, Monday, Feb. 2.

A boiler at TREGO & THOMPSON'S steam forge and rolling mill exploded to-night, killing four men workmen and seriously wounding five

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Action of the Senate Military Committee Regarding the New Generals.

Proposed Reorganization of the Signal Corps.

A Measure to Stop the Pay of Officers Absent from Duty.

AMENDMENT OF THE TAX BILL.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

WORK OF THE SENATE MILITARY COMMITTEE.

The Senate Military Committee, having passed a resolution to refer back to the President all the nominations for Major and Brigadier Generals now before them, an amendment has been prepared, which will be incorporated into some one of the bills now before the Senate, authorizing an increase of thirty Major Generals and seventy Brigadier Generals. This course will provide for as many as the service actually requires, and a selection will be made from the two hundred or over now before the Committee.

The same Committee are preparing an important bill reorganizing the Signal Corps. It is proposed to arrange it so as to make it a department under command of Maj. MYERS. Its present organization, as attached to the army, is found to be, in many respects, very inefficient. The Committee are determined to apply a remedy.

STOPPING THE PAY OF ABSENT OFFICERS.

An important bill, prepared by Senator LANE, of Kansas, is now before the Senate Military Committee, which proposes to stop the pay of unemployed military officers. It is the intention of the Committee and the Senate to put a stop, if possible, to this evil of absenteeism. There are between eight and ten thousand officers absent from their posts, many of whom have not been in service for months.

THE APPOINTMENT OF MIDSHIPMEN.

The Secretary of the Navy to-day replied to the resolution of the Senate in reference to the appointment of midshipmen in the navy. He states that they were made in accordance with an existing law, as construed by the Attorney-General.

THE TAX BILL.

The House Ways and Means Committee are still engaged upon the Tax bill. Several Committees, representing large interests, are importuning the Committee for a reduction of taxes on various articles in which they are interested. Instead of there being any reduction, the Committee will be compelled to add considerably to articles on the tax list. The question to be decided by Committee is, what articles can be additionally taxed?

CONFIRMATIONS.

The Senate, in Executive session to-day, confirmed all the Collectors and Assessors appointed under the Tax bill, except those to whom objections were made.

DEPUTATION OF PENNSYLVANIANS.

Gov. CURTIN, of Pennsylvania, accompanied by a number of members of the Philadelphia Councils and members of the State Legislature, arrived this morning.

THE PROPOSED TELEGRAPH.

The bill for a submarine telegraph to New Orleans and Galveston hangs in the House on a call for the previous question, where it was left by the adjournment, and at which stage it will be taken up to-morrow.

THE BANKRUPT BILL.

The tabling of the bankrupt bill in the House to-day is no indication of the defeat of the measure. Mr. CONKLING has managed to lose some support which belongs to it, and the feeling is in favor of passing the Senate bill instead, as being the better calculated to secure the end in view.

MR. STEVENS' SPEECH.

Mr. STEVENS' speech, inclosing the debate on the Negro Regiment bill, was of unusual power, though, as usual, the Republicans complain that he did them about as much harm as good. His retort on WADSWORTH was peculiarly savage. He had been speaking of "the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky." Mr. WADSWORTH asked if he referred to him, apparently desiring to correct the statement he was making. "Oh, no," said STEVENS, "I referred to Mr. CRITTENDEN, whom I always delight to designate as the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky, because he is distinguished!"

In the course of his speech Mr. STEVENS brought out a terribly-damaging fact against Gen. MCCLELLAN. He said he stated from facts within his own knowledge that MCCLELLAN had as persistently disobeyed the orders of Lieut.-Gen. SCOTT in the earlier part of this war, as recent developments showed he had disobeyed the President at a later period.

PAYING THE ARMY.

Several Paymasters left here yesterday, for the Army of the Potomac, with funds to pay off several brigades in Gen. STONE'S Grand Division.

A DISLOYAL CLERK.

The brother of little SAMUEL S. COX, who was removed from a fat clerkship in the Interior Department, did not even claim to be a Union Democrat. In the Ohio election, a year ago, he violently opposed the Union ticket and labored zealously for straight Democratic candidates. His removal was asked for in a petition signed by a majority of Republican Congressmen; but in spite of this his friends hope to get him a place again,—this time in the War Department. It may be worth while to notice what official proposes now to provide him with Government support.

THE NORFOLK AND NEW-ORLEANS ELECTIONS.

The ground taken by the House Committee on Elections in reporting against the right of the Congressman elect from Norfolk to his seat, is, that there was not a fair expression of a sufficient number of loyal people to give it the semblance of honest representation. In New-Orleans they think there was such expression, and they do not deem it necessary to insist on compliance, in such cases, with legal formalities. If the loyal people of New-Orleans had agreed among themselves to vote without a call from the Military Governor or anybody else, they hold that the election would still have been good. In Norfolk, the absence of such a vote of a reasonable number of loyal people invalidates the election, and they oppose the admission.

VIOLATING THE BLOCKADE.

Two fellows, named W. W. WARD and J. W. LENTS, were captured on Saturday by the Potomac flotilla, while on their way to Dixie with contraband goods. They were committed to the Old Capitol.

"STONEWALL JACKSON'S" CHAPLAIN.

Rev. J. LANDSTREET, a rebel Chaplain, who was captured a few days ago by Col. WYNDHAM, at Middleburgh, Va., and who professes to be the spiritual adviser of Gen. "Stonewall JACKSON," was committed yesterday to the Old Capitol Prison, to await exchange. Since his capture, and until his incarceration, the reverend gentleman has been flourishing around among the hotels here, the lion of the sympathizing rebels of the city. When arrested, he became very indignant, and gave vent to his feelings in language anything but proper and becoming for gentlemen of the cloth.

THE WAY THE ARMY IS DEMORALIZED.

Col. BAKER, Chief of the Government Detective force in this City, yesterday succeeded in unearthing one of the smartest schemes of villainy that has yet been devised to demoralize the Army of the Potomac since the present war begun. Colonels of regiments, for some time past, have realized that their commands were being reduced fearfully by discharges emanating from this city, but as the descriptive list of each one in turn was formally "ordered," it was sufficient evidence for them that the discharges were based upon proper documentary evidence of the disability of the applicant, and therefore could not remonstrate. But so many have recently been discharged upon certificates of disability, that now when a man is placed upon the sick list, it is a common saying among his associates that "he has gone for his discharge papers." Col. BAKER has been able to ascertain that many of these papers were obtained upon forged Surgeon's certificates, and has arrested, for participating in this business, a Dr. EMERSON, and a fellow named CHASE. Their "office" was in the Monumental Hotel bar-room, near the Railroad dépôt. Outside appeared prominently a sign: "Soldiers discharge papers obtained here." This, of course, attracted the attention of soldiers desirous of going home, and for several weeks past the Doctor and his confrères have carried on an extensive business. For full papers of disability signed by the said EMERSON as an army Surgeon, each soldier was required to pay $5. Hundreds of these certificates of disability have gone through the regular channel, and the soldiers have obtained an honorable discharge, entitling them to all the emoluments and benefits to be derived by any one. The Doctor, when arrested, with the utmost coolness acknowledged his guilt, knowing, it is said, that there is no law under which he can be punished. As a matter of safety, the Doctor and his friend CHASE have been placed in the Capitol prison.

REBEL OFFICERS CAPTURED.

W. F. LITTLEPAGE, supposed to be a rebel officer on his way to this city as a spy, was captured on Saturday by one of our gunboats on the Lower Potomac, and forwarded to the Provost-Marshal here, who committed him to the Old Capitol Prison.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

The following nominations for promotion in the Regular Army was sent in by the President on Friday, and, with those heretofore published in the TIMES, completes the list so far as made:

Ward, to be First Lieutenant, Oct. 20, 1862, vice Dodge, dropped; Second Lieut. Albert Coats, to be First Lieutenant, Dec. 23, 1862, vice Enos, who vacates his regimental commission; Second Lieut. Joseph Kerin, to be First Lieutenant, Dec. 23, 1862, vice Claflin, promoted.

Fourth Regiment of Artillery.—Second Lieut. Harry C. Cushing, to be First Lieutenant, Sept. 17, 1862, vice Baker, killed in battle; Second Lieut. Eugene A. Bancroft, to be First Lieutenant, Dec. 13, 1862, vice Dickenson, killed in battle; Brevet Second Lieut. Sylvanus T. Rugg, of the Second Artillery, to be Second Lieutenant, Oct. 22, 1862, vice Cushing, promoted; Brevet Second Lieut. John W. Roder, of the Second Artillery, to be Second Lieutenant, Dec. 13, 1862, vice Bancroft, promoted.

Fifth Regiment of Artillery.—Brevet Second Lieut. W. W. Williams, of the Second Artillery, to be Second Lieutenant, Dec. 29, 1862, vice Taliaferro, resigned.

Fifth Regiment of Infantry.—First Lieut. Allen L. Anderson, to be Captain, Dec. 3, 1862, vice Elwood, deceased; Second Lieut. Frankim Cook, to be First Lieutenant, Dec. 3, 1862, vice Anderson, promoted.

Eleventh Regiment of Infantry—Second Lieut. Irvin B. Wright, to be First Lieutenant, Dec. 15, 1862, vice Gray, deceased.

Twelfth Regiment of Infantry—First Lieut. Stephen Van Rensselaer, to be Captain, Dec. 20, 1862, vice Pennington resigned; Second Lieut. William McC. Nettervilie, to be First Lieutenant, Dec. 20, 1862, vice Rensselaer, promoted.

Seventeenth Regiment of Infantry.—First Lieut. Clarence H. Corning, to be Captain, Dec. 11, 1862, vice Spencer, resigned; First Lieut. Thomas C. J. Bailey, to be Captain, Dec. 14, 1862, vice McLaughburgh, killed in battle; Second Lieut. Alex. Menzies, to be First Lieutenant, Nov. 25, 1862, vice Carpenter, dismissed; Second Lieut. George W. Smith, to be First Lieutenant, Dec. 11, 1862, vice Corning, promoted; Second Lieut. Lyman H. Warren, to be First Lieutenant, Dec. 14, 1862, vice Baily, promoted.

Eighteenth Regiment of Infantry.—First Lieut. Nathaniel C. Kinney, to be Captain, Nov. 25, 1862, vice Breslin, dismissed. Second Lieut. Gilbert S. Carpenter, to be First Lieutenant, Nov. 25, 1862, vice Kinney, promoted.

APPOINTMENTS.

Third Regiment of Cavalry—Private Samuel Hildeburn, of the United States army, to be Second Lieutenant, vice Texter, whose appointment has been revoked.

Fourth Regiment of Cavalry—Sergt.-Maj. John G. Webster, to be Second Lieutenant, vice O'Connell, promoted.

Fifth Regiment of Cavalry—Sergt. William Brophy, of Company D, to be Second Lieutenant, vice Hastings, the regimental Adjutant; Sergt. John Stoddard, of Co. I, to be Second Lieutenant, to fill an original vacancy.

Fifth Regiment of Infantry—Sergt. Samuel L. Comston, of Company E, to be Second Lieutenant, vice Cook, promoted.

Seventh Regiment of Infantry.—Sergt. Richard Comba, of Co. E, to be Second Lieutenant, vice Rice, whose appointment has been revoked.

Eleventh Regiment of Infantry.—Sergt. David Hazzard, of Co. F, to be Second Lieutenant, vice Wright, promoted.

Twelfth Regiment of Infantry.—Sergt. D. W. Carr, of Co. B, Second Battalion, to be Second Lieutenant, vice Nettervilie, promoted; Sergt. W. W. Patterson, of Co. F, Second Battalion, to be Second Lieutenant, to fill an original vacancy.

DEATHS OF SOLDIERS.

The following soldiers have died since our last report:

Fred. Hopkins, Co. I, 9th New-York Cavalry.
L. C. Smith, Co, G, 16th Maine.
Sergt. P. H. McManus, Co. H, 105th New-York.
M. Gariety, Co. A, 9th Massachusetts.
Wm. T. Barrett, Co. K, 39th Massachusetts.
John B. Pope, Co. A, 2d New-York Cavalry.
John Mosner, Co. B, 149th New-York.
L. R. Smith, Co. G, 8th New-York Cavalry.
A. Hill, Co. F, 28th Massachusetts

PROPOSALS FOR OATS AND HAY.

Col. RUCKER, Dépôt Quartermaster here, invites proposals, to be received up to Feb. 9, for furnishing the Government with 200,000 bushels of oats and 5,000 tons of hay—the oats to weigh 32 pounds to the bushel, and the hay 2,000 pounds to the ton. Bids from disloyal parties will not be recognized.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

REVENUE DECISION.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has made the following decision relative to stamps required upon certificates of corporation stock: Whenever the officers of a corporation receive satisfactory evidence that any person, persons or party shall become stockholders in such corporation, and shall make in the books thereof the requisite entries, showing that such person, persons or party shall have become stockholders, and shall make and sign certificate or certificates thereof, it shall be the duty of such officers to affix to every such certificate the appropriate revenue stamp, the expense thereof to be paid by the persons or party for whose use or benefit such certificate or certificates shall be made and signed.

THE NEW-ORLEANS ELECTION CASES.

The Committee on Elections, in deciding upon the claims of Messrs. FLANDERS and HAHN to seats in the House from Louisiana, say they were elected under the proclamation of the Military Governor, SHEPLEY. The principal doubtful point in the case appears to be the time of election fixed by him differing from that of the law of Louisiana. The fact, however, that the rebel Governor had deserted his duty, while the Constitution of the United States guarantees to every State a Republican form of Government, made it necessary for the Military Governor to assume to fix a time for the elections.

LANDS IN MAINE AND MASSACHUSETTS.

Senator DOOLITTLE, to-day, introduced a bill, appropriating to Maine nearly $114,000, and Massachusetts $32,668, for lands, the titles to which must be quieted under the treaty of Washington.

NAVAL AFFAIRS.

Lieut. ALBERT KAUTZ has been ordered to the West Gulf blockading squadron.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

SPEECHES OF WM. E. DODGE, GEN. CASEY, ADMIRAL FOOTE, SENATOR WILLEY AND OTHERS.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 2, 1863.

The President was in his accustomed seat in Dr. GURLEY'S Church, in New-York-avenue, yesterday morning, and listened with fixed attention, as did a large congregation, to a discourse on the relations of the Christian Sabbath, by Rev. Mr. COOK, of your City.

A large public meeting was held at the same place last evening, to promote the better observance of Sunday in the army and navy. The speakers were preeminently "representative men"—from the pulpit, the counting-house, the army, the navy, the Senate and the House. Rev. Mr. COOK sketched the history and results of the beneficent reforms connected with the New-York Sabbath Committee's enterprises, and opened the discussion of the topic of the evening.

WM. E. DODGE, Esq., your merchant prince, made one of his happiest addresses, illustrating by his experience in railway boards of direction, and as a traveler, the economical advantages of due Sabbath observance, and applying the principles thus illustrated to the army and navy.

The veteran Gen. CASEY responded to an invitation for his testimony, and in a few brief sentences gave utterance to sentiments worthy to be proclaimed in the ears of the army and the nation. "I have been thirty-six years in the military service," said he, "and I know that the army needs a Sabbath. I was five years in the Florida war. In long marches, better time will be made, and the men will go through in better condition by resting on the Sabbath than by continuous marching. No prudent General will plan for a Sunday battle. I would appeal to the American people to save our American Sabbath. If our wealth is lost in this terrible war, it may be recovered. If our young men are killed off, others will grow up: but if our Sabbath is lost, it can never be restored, and all is lost." The audience was affected to tears by these sententious words, from the gray-headed warrior.

Rear-Admiral FOOTE followed in behalf of the Navy, and illustrated the value of the Sabbath to the discipline and efficiency of his branch of the service, from his own experience at sea and on the Western flotilla. He said he had always taken the chaplain's place, when there was no such officer present, as he thought every commander should. And he advocated the same courage and decision in the discharge of Christian duty as in the performance of military or naval duties.

Senator WILLEY, of Western Virginia, made a noble speech, breathing the spirit of loyalty to God and country. His view of national dependence on God, and of the necessity of prosecuting a righteous war in a manner to secure the favor of Heaven and in subordination to law, human and divine, was strongly and eloquently expressed. He was followed with a few cordial words from the Hon. Mr. ODELL, of Brooklyn, and the meeting dispersed.

Who has not observed the fact that the rebels show in the dispatches of their Generals, in the discipline of their armies, and in all that we learn of their policy, a juster sense of their dependence on the Supreme Being, and of the power of the religious element, than is common among National officers? Why is this? Should it be so? Are we strong enough to conquer without the aid of "the God of Mercy and of Battles?" Can even a just cause triumph when contended for in the spirit of lawlessness and self-sufficiency? Will not the counsels of these veteran Generals and Admirals and Senators be heeded now when our own strength is proven to be weakness and our unaided wisdom folly? Yours, L. N. K.

THE McDOWELL COURT OF INQUIRY

From Our Own Reporter.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 3, 1863.

In the McDowell Court of Inquiry to-day, Gen. McDowell recalled Lieut.-Col. Tilleson, Capt. Haven, Col. Schriver and Capt. Leski, to show further, in contradiction of Col. Locke's testimony, that Gen. King was not in company with Gen. McDowell on the afternoon of the 29th of August, and that no communication passed between Gen. McDowell and Gen. Porter on the subject of the latter's remaining where he was. These witnesses stated that as aids of Gen. McDowell, almost constantly in his presence on the afternoon of that day, they knew nothing of the presence of Gen. King with Gen. McDowell, and nothing of any communication between Gen. McDowell and Gen. Porter, through staff officers of the latter or otherwise, after Gen. McDowell left Gen. Porter at the head of the latter's column.

Gen. Milroy not having arrived to testify, that part of his official report relating to the conduct of Gen. McDowell on the 30th of August, was, by consent of Gen. McDowell, read as evidence, as follows: "At one time, not receiving assistance from the rear, as I had a right to expect after having sent for it, and our struggling battalions being nearly overcome by the weight and persistence of the enemy's attack, I fell back about one-half mile to where I understood Gen. McDowell was with a large portion of his corps. I found him, and appealed to him in the most urgent manner to send a brigade forward at once to save the day or all would be lost. He answered coldly in substance that it was not his business to help everybody, and he was not going to help Gen. Sigel. I told him I was not fighting with Gen. Sigel's corps; that my brigade had got out of ammunition some time before and gone to the rear, and that I had been fighting with a half dozen different brigades, and that I had not inquired where or to what particular corps they belonged. He inquired of one of his Aids if Gen. —— was fighting over there on the left. He answered he thought he was. McDowell replied that he would send him help, for he was a good fellow. He then gave the order for a brigade to start, which was all I desired. I dashed in front of them, waved my sword, and cheered them forward."

Lieut. Roebling, Sixth New-York Battery, called by Gen. McDowell, was present on the 30th of August last, on the occasion of Gen. Milroy coming to Gen. McDowell and asking for reinforcements. Gen. Milroy came to within 70 or 75 feet of Gen. McDowell; was in a very excited state of mind, and spoke at the top of his voice. He was waving his sword and his hat was off. He said, "For God's sake, General send a few regiments into those woods. My poor men are being all cut to pieces. If you will send me some reinforcements we will be able to drive the enemy back yet." In addition to this, he made a great many expressions without any apparent connection. Gen. McDowell did not make any reply to Gen. Milroy which could have been heard by the latter. After hesitating some ten minutes, and on receiving a note by an officer, Gen. McDowell gave orders for a brigade of Porter's to advance into the woods. Witness did not hear any thing said by either Gen. McDowell or Gen. Milroy about Gen. Sigel.

Question by the Court—Gen. McDowell was talking with Gen. Porter during the ten minutes hesitation. After reading the note, Gen. McDowell said, with great animation, "now I have authority—now all is right. Let us go in."

Capt. J. W. Cutting testified to about the same effect. He did not think that Gen. McDowell made any reply to Gen. Milroy, and was quite certain that nothing was said about Gen. Sigel.

Col. Buchanan, who went with the reinforcements which were sent forward, is expected to be examined to-morrow, when the evidence is to be closed.

The Arrest of the Proprietor of the Philadelphia Evening Journal.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

Mr. BOILEAU, the proprietor of the Philadelphia Evening Journal, who was arrested on the charge of treason, and confined in Fort McHenry, has resumed the publication of his paper.

In to-day's issue he has a letter which was written in Fort McHenry.

In this letter, he says:

"Those who supposed that we were other than a Union Democrat have been mistaken. We advocate the claims of the Democratic party because its men of that party are the truest friends of the Union. He is no Democrat who is not unqualifiedly in favor of the Union and the Constitution."

GEN. McCLELLAN IN BOSTON.

Deputations from Portland, Me., Concord, N. H., and Lowell, Mass., wait upon Him—A Grand Serenade by all the Music Bands of Boston.

BOSTON, Mass., Tuesday, Feb. 3.

A delegation from Portland, Me., numbering a hundred of the most influential and respectable gentlemen of that city, had an interview with Gen. McCLELLAN last evening, and through the Hon. L. D. M. SWEAT, their Chairman, presented him with the complimentary resolutions inviting him to visit the City of Portland.

Gen. McCLELLAN received the Committee with the greatest courtesy, expressing his thanks for the flattering honor conferred upon him. He then alluded with satisfaction to the conservative feeling which he saw springing up in New-England, and remarked that he saw in this conservatism the hope, the strength and the glory of the nation. In concluding his short but eloquent speech, he promised to send on a written reply to the invitation to visit the citizens of Portland.

A Committee from Concord, N. H., then called upon the General, and presented him with an invitation to visit that city, after which Col. JOHN A. GEORGE made a brief complimentary address.

Gen. McCLELLAN responded, saying that he felt highly honored at receiving such an invitation from his fellow-citizens of Concord, and he knew not how sufficiently to thank them for it, but that he was unable to accept of it, in consequence of having already exceeded the time devoted to his visit to the East. He further said that he was preparing a history of the Peninsula campaign, to which he wished to devote the principal portion of his time. At some future time, however, he hoped to have the pleasure of meeting his friends in Concord—but until then he must ask their kindly patience.

A delegation from the City of Lowell, Mass., then waited upon the General for the purpose of tendering him the hospitalities of that city.

The General replied that he deeply regretted that he was compelled to decline this kind and unexpected invitation, but that he hoped the delegation would convey to the citizens of Lowell his appreciation of the honor they had done him, as he felt and appreciated it deeply.

The General will visit Lawrence to-day.

To-night a grand serenade will be given to the General by all the musical bands of the City of Boston, who will assemble in front of the Tremont House.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Feb. 3—P. M.

Gen. McCLELLAN, accompanied by his wife and several friends, visited Lawrence to-day, in a special train. His reception was the most hearty of any demonstration in the history of that city. Thousands of citizens greeted him, amid the firing of cannon and ringing of bells. By invitation of WILEY EDMONDS, Treasurer, the General was escorted to the Pacific Mills and manufactory. The General took much interest in examining that immense manufactory. After passing through the various operating rooms, he was conducted to the hall of the Pacific Company, where 3,000 children, who were assembled, greeted him with hearty cheers, and sang a couple of songs—"March along" and the "Star Spangled Banner"—with which the General and his company seemed much pleased. Afterwards the party partook of a collation in one of the Pacific buildings.

Early in the evening the party returned to Boston. The General has been obliged to decline all the invitations to visit Portland, Concord, Lowell, &c.

The Serenade to Gen. McClellan.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

The serenade to Gen. McCLELLAN took place this evening, at the Tremont House, where he is stopping. The affair was almost wholly private, and but few outsiders were admitted. The orchestra consisted of over 50 pieces, and the music was furnished in the parlors.

DEAFNESS

NOISES IN THE HEAD,

Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat,

CATARRH CURED

BY

DR. VON EISENBERG.

From the Journal of Commerce.

EXCITING NEWS FOR THE DEAF.—An instrument called Dr. Von Eisenberg's Air Passage Expander and Regulator, a gigantic machine, weighing nearly five hundred pounds, about five feet in height, a most wonderful apparatus for restoring sight and hearing, has just arrived for Dr. Von Eisenberg, the celebrated Oculist and Aurist, and will be on exhibition at the Doctor's office, No. 916 Broadway, for a few days previous to its use. The instrument is constructed decidedly on the most scientific principles. To give a detailed description would require a greater space than we can now spare. Our Oculist and Aurist seems to do everything in the line of his profession on a gigantic scale. The new instrument for restoring hearing to the deaf and sight to the blind is so constructed that it cannot fail to open the most obstructed air passages. His new consulting rooms, No. 816 Broadway, are correspondingly magnificent, and his practice as Aurist and Oculist large and eminently successful.

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

NEW-YORK, June 14, 1862.

I have great pleasure to add my testimony to the number of others which Dr. Von Eisenberg's great skill has already gained for him. I was suffering from deafness, accompanied by a very unpleasant discharge from my ear. The Doctor operated upon my ear, removing a polypus with a gentleness that fully demonstrated the efficiency of the scientific system peculiar to himself. I am completely restored to hearing.

JOSEPH MANNING, No. 103 West 36th-st.

NEW-YORK, June 10, 1862.

I have been for many years afflicted with deafness, accompanied by a roaring noise in my head, for the treatment of which I placed myself under the care of Dr. Von Eisenberg, and am happy to say that in this case the Doctor has shown that skill and knowledge which has placed him at the head of his profession. I do, therefore, with the utmost confidence, recommend any one afflicted with deafness to place themselves under his care.

HENRY BROWNING, No. 241 West 34th-st.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 6, 1862.

DR. VON EISENBERG—Dear Sir: Before taking leave of you, after your most successful operation on my ear, allow me to express my sincere thanks that, by your scientific surgical performance, I am enabled to hear distinctly, and enjoy a pleasure of which I have long been deprived—over a year. May you be rewarded by being enabled to perform many similar, to benefit other sufferers, and to your own emolument.

Allow me to present my kindest regards, and assure you of my grateful remembrance. Respectfully,
A. McDONALD REYNOLDS,
Captain Marines, United States.

NEW-YORK, April 14, 1862.

I have great pleasure in testifying to the complete success of Dr. VON EISENBERG. I have been afflicted with deafness and noises in the head for several years, with many indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. VON EISENBERG has surpassed my belief in his skillful treatment to cure me in so short a time, and I am abundantly satisfied. S. A. SMITH,
No. 138 Atlantic-st., South Brooklyn.

NEW-YORK, May 17, 1862.

I have much pleasure in being able to certify that I have suffered for a long time from Sclerotitis, and nearly complete loss of sight. I have consulted a great many, as well as visiting institutions, not only without benefit, but my case was given up as incurable. I despaired of ever recovering my sight, until hearing of Dr. Von Eisenberg's great cures, I determined to place myself under his care as a last resource. It resulted in a complete cure. From the skillful treatment, great care and attention which I experienced from the Doctor, I have no hesitation in recommending all those suffering from diseases of the eye to place themselves under Dr. Von Eisenberg's care, with a certainty of being completely cured. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony.

JOSEPH WALKER, Greenpoint.

MEDICAL.

AFFLICTED RESTORED! IGNORANCE EXPOSED! FALLACIES UNMASKED!

HIGHLY IMPORTANT TO BOTH SEXES, married or single, in health or disease. Dr. LARMONT of Paris, London and New-York Medical Adviser and Marriage Guide, (75th edition, 400 pages, nearly 100 Anatomical Illustrations,) upon Mental and Nervous Debility, Urinary Deposits, Involuntary Loss of Semen, Impotency, Affections of the Bladder and Kidneys, Genito-Urinary diseases and their consequences, the anatomy of the sexual organs of the male and female; latest researches in physiology; European hospital practice; quacks, their recipes and specifics; the author's unequaled Paris and London treatment, &c. Mailed free for $1, closely sealed.

All who would avoid unsuccessful and barbarous treatment with Mercury, Copaiba, Injections, Cauterizations, Quack Specifics, Antidotes, Instruments, &c., should purchase the original work, of E. WALKER, No. 1 Vesey-st.; S. TOUSEY, No. 121 Nassau-st., or consult the Doctor, No. 647 Broadway, (up stairs,) New-York, from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

We concur with other papers in recommending Dr. LARMONT and his work.—Courrier des Etats Unis, German die Reform, Dispatch, Staats Zeitung, Atlas, Medical Review, &c.

SURE CURE—BY DR. POWERS, SUCCESSfully consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 12 Leight-st. Conducted on the plan of the Hospital des Veneriens, Paris, where those afflicted with any form of private disease can receive prompt treatment, without risk or exposure, viz.: Syphilis, gonorrhœa, gleet, strictures, ulcers, tumors, cancers, secondary and constitutional syphilis, diseases of the kidneys, &c., &c. Thirty years of extensive practice, exclusively devoted to the treatment of those complaints enable us to effect cures in cases where others of less experience have failed. Dr. Powers' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. This marvelous agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitutions—physical disqualifications, impediments to marriage, thereby speedily cured. The men to consult, Drs. Ward and Powers, the champions and kings of venereal diseases, possessing the most certain, speedy and only effectual remedies in the world, guarantee a perfect cure, or no charge, in from one to three days. Established in 1850, N. B.—Those who have used their preventives are never without. Send for a circular. To Ladies.—Dr. Powers' Medical Drops are a safe and certain remedy for monthly irregularities. The above remedies sent by mail. The afflicted should read their circular. Postage free, on receipt of a stamp. Cures warranted.

IMPORTANT TO THE MARRIED AND THOSE ABOUT TO BE MARRIED.—DR. M. LA RICHARD, Professor of Diseases of Women, has just published the 160th edition of the valuable book, entitled "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," strictly intended for those whose health or circumstances forbid a too rapid increase of family. Price $1. Sold at his office, No. 130 Liberty-st., New-York; or can be sent by mail, free of postage, to any part of the United States and Canada, by inclosing $1, and addressing Box No. 1,224 New-York City. For sale by H. RICHARDSON, No. 1 Vesey-st., (Astor House,) and No. 18 Ann-st.; FREDERHEN & CO., 13 Court-st., Boston.

DR. COBBETT, MEMBER OF THE N. Y. University, (Medical College,) and Royal College of Surgeons, London, has removed from No. 19 Duane-st. to his present very convenient suite of offices at No. 92 Centre-st., between Chambers and Reade sts., with a private entrance at No. 6 City Hall-place, where he can be consulted with the most honorable confidence on all diseases affecting the urinary organs: thirty years of his present speciality, (three of which have been at the Hospitals of this City,) enable him to guarantee a cure in every case undertaken, or make no charge. Strictures of the urethra, impotency, seminal weaknesses, &c., treated on the most scientific principles. N. B.—As a proof of Dr. C.'s qualifications, he would call special attention to his Diplomas, which can be seen in his office.

DR. COOPER, NO. 14 DUANE-ST., MAY BE confidently consulted on all diseases of a private nature. A practice of 30 years, devoted to the treatment and cure of Syphilitic, Mercurial and Diseases of a delicate nature, enables Dr. C. to make speedy and permanent cures, no matter of how long standing the case may be. Strictures of the urethra and seminal weakness, brought on by a secret habit, effectually cured. The victims of misplaced confidence, who have been misled by quack advertisements, can call on Dr. C. with the certainty of being radically cured. N. B.—Dr. C. is a qualified physician and surgeon, and a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New-York. Office hours from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by DR. WARD & CO., No. 12 Leight-st., near Canal, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 15 years' practice he has cured more cases of recent Disease and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. He can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call; it will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much-neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from Impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a few treatments. Persons at a distance, failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to DR. WARD, No. 12 Leight-st., the only place. Call, send or write.

THE VIGOR OF YOUTH IS RESTORED by Dr. POWERS' ESSENCE OF LIFE OR INVIGORATING ELIXIR, and Dr. Powers' Radical Pills or Physical Regenerator. Young man! Are you subject to that soul and body destroying disease resulting from secret habits? Dr. POWERS' Invigorating Essence and Medical Pills briefly cure the very worst cases, while innocent of anything deleterious, and are warranted a never-failing cure. Prepared and sold by Dr. POWERS, No. 12 Leight-st., New-York. Afflicted, try them! They will certainly cure. Send for circular; read it carefully, and then you will send for the remedies.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL VIEW OF MARRIAGE—Containing nearly 300 pages and 150 fine plates and engravings of the anatomy of the sexual organs, in a state of health and disease, with a treatise on self-abuse, its deplorable consequences upon the mind and body, with the author's plan of treatment—the only rational and successful mode of cure, as shown by the report of cases treated. A truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain doubts of their physical condition. Sent free of postage to any address on receipt of 25 cents, in specie or postage stamps. Address Dr. LA CROIX, No. 31 Maiden-lane, Albany, N. Y.

SOMETHING FOR EVERY LADY.—DR. WARD'S Great Female Benefactor or Golden Regulating Pills. Infallible in correcting, regulating and removing all obstructions, from whatever cause, designed for purely legitimate purposes—to restore the menstrual fluid—and they will never disappoint the anxious patient. Office, No. 12 Leight-st., where Dr. WARD can be consulted, confidentially, day and evening.

DR. RALPH, AUTHOR OF THE "PRIVATE TREATISE," &c., No. 134 Bleecker-st., west of Broadway. Those who apply in the earlier stages will be surprised at the ease and rapidity of the cure.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. That is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some private disease of an obstinate character, sold or prescribed by them, and the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attempted it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 5 Division-st. Book free by three-cent stamp, 200 pages, 100 colored illustrations. They bear work out.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT.

In the matter of the application of the Board of Commissioners of the Central Park, in the name and on behalf of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, relative to the acquisition of lands for a PUBLIC PARK OR PLACE,

Between the southerly side of One Hundred and Sixth-street and One Hundred and Tenth-street and the Fifth and Eighth avenues,

IN THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.

We, the undersigned, Commissioners of Estimate and Assessment in the above entitled matter, hereby give notice to the owner or owners, occupant or occupants of all houses and lots, and improved or unimproved lands affected thereby, and to all others whom it may concern, to wit:

First—That we have completed our estimate and assessment, and that all persons whose interests are affected thereby, and who may be opposed to the same, do present their objections in writing, duly verified, to LUTHER BRADISH, Esq., our Chairman, at the Office of the Commissioners, No. 6 Wall-street, in this City, on or before the 23d day of February, 1863.

Second—That the Abstract of the said Estimate and Assessment, together with our maps, and also all the affidavits, estimates, and other documents which were used by us in making our report, have been deposited in the Street Commissioner's Office of the City and County of New-York, there to remain until the 31st day of March, 1863.

Third—That the limits embraced by the Assements aforesaid are as follows, to wit:

Bounded on the North by the southerly line of one hundred and twenty-fifth-street; on the East by a line running northerly and southerly between and equally distant from the second and third Avenues; on the South by the northerly line of Ninety-sixth-street; and on the West by a line running northerly and southerly between and equally distant from the Tenth and Eleventh Avenues.

Excluding therefrom the lands embraced within the following description: "Between the southerly side of one hundred and sixth-street and one hundred and tenth-street and the fifth and eighth Avenues."

And

Fourth.—That our report herein will be presented to the Supreme Court of the State of New-York, at a Special Term thereof, to be held at the City Hall in the said City, on Tuesday, the 31st day of March, 1863, at the opening of the Court on that day, and that then and there, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard thereon, a motion will be made that the said report be confirmed.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

A full house and WENDELL PHILLIPS have been seen and heard together for so many years, that a moderate assemblage at any place where he had been announced to speak, would be matter of surprise, and would warrant a lengthy notice. But the audience last evening at Plymouth Church was not a moderate one in any sense. The church was literally crammed, at 7 o'clock, although it had been advertised that the proceedings would not be commenced until 8 o'clock, and all seemed to know that fact, for it was not until the hour hand upon the dial had reached the then most interesting figure upon the dial's face, that the slightest impatience was shown, and that was answered immediately by a voluntary on the organ, followed by the singing of a hymn to liberty, written by Mr. THEODORE TILTON, and which was earnestly and heartily approved. The singing of the hymn concluded, Mr. PHILLIPS appeared upon the platform, accompanied by Mr. TILTON. As soon as the presence of Mr. PHILLIPS was known to the assemblage, he was long and rapturously applauded. When the general enthusiastic demonstrations had partially subsided, Mr. TILTON came forward and spoke substantially as follows:

REMARKS OF MR. TILTON.

He said he had been requested by Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, to say that it had been his intention to be upon the platform that evening to introduce his friend. But he had been debarred that privilege by engagements, partially caused by the demise of his lamented father. Under such circumstances, he had delegated him (Mr. T.) to welcome his friend to the platform of Plymouth Church, and introduce him to his audience; and in doing so, he felt sure that there was no frequenter of Plymouth Church, or other friend of the broadest humanity, who would not welcome to the freest of free-speech, WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Mr. PHILLIPS was then introduced amid renewed applause, and proceeded to speak as follows of "Our Future:"

SPEECH OF WENDELL PHILLIPS.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: This is indeed the third time that I have had the pleasure of standing on this platform, and this is the first time that I can say, to my great delight, that in coming here this evening I am exchanging pulpits with Mr. BEECHER, (laughter,) for he speaks to-night in Boston, from the Music Hall platform—where I am sometimes found—to a crowd, if possible, larger than you give me to-night. You recollect when I first had the pleasure of standing here. It was when a New-York mob had driven us from the Tabernacle, and when there was neither law nor order enough in that City to permit an Anti-Slavery voice to be heard. It was then that your Pastor said that if New-York was overawed by the mob, Brooklyn was yet open for free speech, and that here it should be defended. [Applause.] The second time that I stood here was nigh three years ago, when I spoke to you in relation to JOHN BROWN, then in a Virginia jail. How great the result of that idea which he pressed upon the country! Do you know with what poetic justice Providence treats that very town where he lay in jail when I spoke to you before? The very man who went down from Philadelphia to bring his body back to his sad relatives—insulted every mile of the road, his life threatened, the bullets whistling around his head—that very man, for eight or ten months is Brigadier-General in command of the town of Charlestown and Harper's Ferry. [Applause.] By order of his superior officers, he had the satisfaction of finding it his duty, with his own right hand, to put the torch to that very hotel into which he had been followed with insult and contumely, as the friend of JOHN BROWN; and when his brigade was under orders to destroy all the buildings of that neighborhood, with reverential care he bade the soldiers stop to spare that engine-house that once sheltered the old hero. [Applause.] I do not know any history more perfectly poetic than of that single local instance given us in three short years. HECTOR TINDALE, the friend of JOHN BROWN, who went there almost with his life in his right hand, commands, and his will is law, his sword the guarantee of peace, and by his order the town is destroyed, with the single exception of that hall, which JOHN BROWN'S presence has rendered immortal.

Now, the whole history of the country is in that single instance—wrapped up in it is the struggle which we come here to-night to talk about. I am to speak to you about our future. Well, it is fair to say that every one of you knows that no man can prognosticate our future. Great events, vast interests—the elements of civil society crushing and jostling against each other. In the Kaleidoscope of the future no man can sketch a certain picture. We can only speculate about the probable working out of the problem. We can only suggest for the moment what seems to be the duty of good citizens in bringing the country quickest and safest out of the struggle. I think if there are any ideas, fundamental, practical, indestructible—part and parcel of the American mind—they are these two—free speech on every subject—unfettered liberty of thought and utterance everywhere, and on every topic. That is the fundamental ideal of American civilization, and next to that, almost as fundamental, is that other element of our national character, the certainty that the continent belongs to us. [Applause.] That civilization is the working out of the most unfettered individuality consistent with comfort, and the space given us by Providence for the working out of the problem is the American Continent. [Applause.] I believe these ideas make as much the real core of the heart of the man of Louisiana, as they do of Massachusetts, whether he is aware of it or not. Now with such a national character, but one future is possible, and that is the future of freedom—the future of Union. [Applause.] No other great quiet haven awaits us. Everything this side of that is struggle—is either war or next door to it. I believe we never shall reach peace—the country will never settle down to its normal level, until it has reached absolute freedom and entire unity from the Lakes to the Gulf. Now some men speak of separation as one thing, and advise one thing, and others advise the contrary. Some men speak of separation as a path to that result. Some men speak of the Proclamation of the President; others fear submission to the slave power. The Republican ideal is Union on an Anti-Slavery basis. The Democratic ideal is Union on any basis whatever; the reconstruction of the Southern States—a convention—a carte blanche—"Come in, no matter what terms you fix." My belief is that all that is only another name for war more or less disguised, with chances of final peacemeal, and war. In a true sense, this country has never known anything but war. From '83 it was a war of ideas—it was a war of the ballot-box—it was a war of persuasion—it was a war of pulpits, but it was all the same war. The Southerner hated the Northerner, because he knew his "institution" was unsafe as long as the Yankee asked questions. [Laughter.] JEFFERSON DAVIS knows to-day that there is but one corner-stone for a Southern Confederacy based on Slavery, and that is disloyal, in New-England, but he knows that that result can never come. He may "leave New-England out in the cold," but in the cold she still talks. [Laughter and applause,] and as long as she exists thinking, his system rests on its apex, not on its base. It totters. It cannot live. It is not a war of sections. He knows it. New-Orleans to-day left to herself—persists that that flag of the Union would not be taken down—guaranteed against a Confederate reaction—New-Orleans to-day is in sympathy with New-York. She knows it is her interest. It is not a war of sections. It is a war of ideas—ending only when one idea strangles the other, and not before. Peace comes when freedom holds the helm, and not before. Now, I would accept anything on an Anti-Slavery basis. I would accept separation. I would accept compromise. I would accept Union. I would accept peace, and pay the whole Confederate debt at par on an Anti-Slavery basis. On that basis I have touched the hard-pan of National existence. I have reached the granite strata, and may begin to build again in peace. And until I reach that, no chicanery of parties, no ingenuity of compromise, no manner of separation can make any difference. We are in for the war. The South knows it, and if the North don't know it now, it will learn it in the course of a year or two. [Laughter.] These events of the day, what do they mean? They mean the irresistable end of our institutions, which are stronger than any individual. That undercurrent which is bearing us on, and has borne us on for the last thirty years. It is an undercurrent to which we contribute, but which we have never controlled—inherent in free speech and in free thought. It is free speech a reality—no Wall-street Bank—no National parchment. Do you remember the boyish legend of the young man who went out to seek his fortune, and some fairy gave him a mill by which, when he entered into trade, he could procure any kind of product he wanted. He had only to wind it up, and pronounce the charm.

Grind mill—grind I say—
Grind I say—grind away.

Instantly—whether he asked silk or wool, cotton or bricks, he had them. So he fixed up his large warehouse, and commenced business in the far East, or the South, where such things occur. His neighbors watched the process, and stole the mill. You recollect this is the way the legend accounts for the saltness of the sea. The man got the stolen mill on board ship and weighed anchor, designing to carry the prize to some other land. He wanted salt, wound up the mill, pronounced the charmed words, and the mill ground out salt. It ground and ground; but he had forgotten to learn the counter-charm to stop the mill—so it covered the ship with salt. It sunk the ship, and then salted the whole sea, and is grinding yet. [Laughter and applause.] Now, free speech is that mill. [Roars of laughter.] It began to grind when the Puritans landed at Plymouth Rock. It ground out Massachusetts. [Applause.] It ground out the Revolution. It ground out the Declaration of Independence. It ground out the Constitution. It ground out the Missouri agitation, that nearly broke the nation in halves. It ground out Kansas. It ground out Sumter. It ground out FREMONT'S Proclamation on the plains of Missouri. [Applause.] It ground out ABRAHAM LINCOLN and the first day of January. [Applause.] He meant to stop the salt in the beginning, but it will sink the nation with the saltness of the Proclamation that covers the continent. [Applause.] He cannot stop it. It is grinding to-day. [Applause.] It will grind forever, and JEFF. DAVIS knows, and the whole South knows, that it will grind out their nation—making a bondage and aristocracy impossible in the nature of things. [Applause.] Now it is between these inherent and uncontrollable elements that the war goes on to-day.

The question with us is: What is to be the fate of this generation? Are we to believe, with Senator LANE, of Kansas, that if the North is defeated in this individual fight, that we must write on her tombstone, "Killed by West Point?" or is there behind this routine something, so that we shall find the sky all bright and the clouds all gilded? Practically, where are the dangers? Well, it seems that the dangers are these. There lay before us two sections, the North and the South, geographically for a moment. At the North is the Democratic party raising its head, and by the Democratic party I mean everything that wishes to settle this question without cleaning out Slavery. [Applause.] Everything opposed to peace on an Anti-Slavery basis, I include in my word Democrat. Now, what does this party mean to do? On the 4th of March, when this present Republican Congress ceases to exist—if not sooner called together by the President, and exerting the moral weight of the existence of such a legislative body of the Government—it means by the Supreme Court, which nobody is certain that he can trust to create a case to carry before that bench as they did the Dred Scott case. They expect an adverse decision, and upon the announcement of that decision they mean to throw the Judiciary across the path of the Executive, and say to the people that the Proclamation of the President conflicts with the Constitution. They may disarm the whole military movement, and the North may be put back, and also the preparations and purposes of the Republican Party—to prepare the way for a remonstrance, then for a convention, then for the admission of the rebel States into that convention, and than carte blanche for reconstruction on the basis of submission for a while to the old Slave power and the Constitution of '87. Now any man who knows the purpose of his party cannot doubt that what I have sketched in these few sentences is a fair view of the programme which they wish to carry out. Whether there will be an actual outbreak, and a marshaling of States against the National Government; whether there will be an effort to carry out the programme I have indicated, as I have indicated is the purpose of the party—this is the dark cloud before us. The reaction is not strong in its own strength—not because in the hearts of the people that is any basis for such a reaction, but because the Administration has given to its own party nothing to eat, [laughter and applause,] nothing to live upon, [laughter,] no military success, no assumption of power in the rebel States, no military activity, and, until the 1st of January last, not even a principle to swear by. [Applause.] The Republican Party has been defeated in the struggle simply because they had no means of replying to the bitter and relentless discouragements of their neighbors, in the elections of last Fall. I say this is the dark cloud in the sky before us.

Well, what is the bright section? The bright section is most in the policy—such as it is—of the Administration. I came from Washington recently, and I cannot say hardly whether I am encouraged or discouraged. I cannot say we have not armies enough. The fault is not there. I think we have men enough, if we had leaders, as LOWELL said in his last poem:

"Not men, but men, 'tis thus we fail,
Weak plants grow weaker by the lenghtening,
What use in adding to the tail,
When 'tis the head that needs the strengthening?"

That is exactly what we need—less Cabinet Presidents. Now, I find no Cabinet in Washington, and except the President, I find few honest men. But I will tell you what I think he was made of. He has sat for thirty years in Springfield, Illinois—to the north of him was a portion of the State free, educated, and republican. To the south was Egypt—ignorant, Pro-Slavery, worse than doughface—[laughter]—Southern, servile, dark. Mr. LINCOLN has been balancing all his life between these two elements to be popular with both, and he is the result of the balance. [Laughter.] This was his education for thirty years—no crime—because he lived there he could not help it. [Laughter.] He has succeeded in being the favorite of that Mosaic State Illinois, and the result is ABRAHAM LINCOLN. [Applause.] Now there is no use in deceiving ourselves. When we take account of stock there is no use in making up the goods too high. [Laughter.] Well, how much can he be counted upon? His purpose may be good, but, in his own State he never walked a straight line. And the result was a zigzag, and he was not able, in his present condition, to get out of his old habit. [Applause.] He could not have been elected if he had been a Northern man. The reason why your Senator (Mr. SEWARD) was rejected was because he was thought to be a Northern man. Was it a great mistake? Now you may question the Cabinet. Why had you Gov. STANLY in North Carolina? Oh, that was a mistake. Why have you BANKS in New-Orleans? That was a mistake. But how happens it that there is never a mistake that inures to the benefit of Abolition? Now, if I see a drunken man in the street, he falls impartially to the right and left. Then I know he is drunk. [Laughter.] But suppose he walks along the street, and falls always to the right side? I know he has got a brick in the right side of his hat. [Laughter.] Now, the Administration, when it makes a mistake, does it in the interest of Slavery; it looks as if it had a brick in the south side of its hat.

We are to take, therefore, into our calculation of chances this item, that we have a President at present, so far as any probability appears, for all time; we are to have an Administration with this Southern bias. If we are saved, we are to be saved in spite of the Administration. If we are saved, I believe we shall be saved because it was not possible for ABRAHAM LINCOLN to ruin us. Now, I say it, notwithstanding I allow the honest purpose of the man. But time is one great element in this problem—time, that is hardening the South into a nation—time, that is weakening the North into decrepitude, and despair—time, that is ripening the decision of Europe, to put her hand into the quarrel—time, that is confusing the slave, and making him doubtful whether either side means him any advantage—time, that, as NAPOLEON said, "every hour lost is an opportunity for misfortune." To be sure, the Government made a great mistake, and acknowledged it, when they sent Gov. BANKS down to New-Orleans, but what is the consequences of the mistake? They mean to send Gen. BUTLER back in sixty or ninety days. [Cheers for Gen. BUTLER.] He deserves a good cheer. He is the only General, in my mind, who has comprehended his office. From the first moment that he put on a shoulder-strap, he has been convinced of this one thing—"I am the Government, and those are traitors." [Applause.] He is the only one of our Major-Generals who, if he should die to-night, can have it carved on his tombstone—"I am the only American who has yet dared to hang a traitor." [Great cheering.] Mr. PHILLIPS continued to eulogize Gen. BUTLER'S administration of affairs at New-Orleans.

When BANKS goes to that city, he lets it to be understood, in a thousand ways which a man's position is understood that he disapproves of the whole régime of Gen. BUTLER, and goes to replace it with another. The consequence is that Gen. BUTLER is insulted in private, and the consequence is that Gen. BANKS sends the Fifteenth New-Hampshire Regiment, with free-born granite hearts, after the first day of January, to fling the slaves on the plantations of Louisiana. [Cries of "Shame, shame."] When the President said to us, "I would like to know what the blacks think of my Proclamation," we said, "How will you ever know, when your own General sends them in the Department to which you send him. I think the One Hundred and Sixty-second Regiment of your own State, under Col. BENEDICT, has been detailed on one plantation whose master feared the insubordination of his slaves on the 2d day of January, and sent for your own New-York boys to stand guard over the slaves that were holding out their hands for the Proclamation, and your guarded them into silence. ["Shame, shame."] Now, sixty or ninety days are to intervene before this timid, faltering, stupid General from Massachusetts is to be reproached by Gen. BUTLER—every hour golden, precious days before Republicanism deserts the Capitol, and they are to be wasted. A very disastrous mistake. But he goes back, as the Administration assures all comers. He goes back to put in the places of the 300,000 white soldiers which are to go out before the first day of May, 300,000 black men from the south of Mason and Dixon's line. [Applause.] He carries with him 100,000 muskets, and Gen. HUNTER carries 50,000, and they are manned by black right hands. I consider that a great encouragement. It will take a long time for the slave to be convinced of our sincerity. Great bodies, like two millions of slaves, move slowly. But the best thing that can be done is, that BUTLER, whose name is the Proclamation, who carries it wherever he goes, should be sent to that Department. We claimed of the President, also, in North Carolina, where Gen. STANLEY blocks the course of Government; where every free spirit in the State complains of him, and sends up his complaint to Washington, and it is not heard, that he should be removed. When we carried him the protest of Massachusetts against Gov. STANLEY, the President said, "I have not heard a word of complaint against him for four months." I took upon me the presumption to say to some forty Senators and representatives, when I met them. Do you suppose we pay you $3,000 a year to stay here in Washington, and not tell the President the truth? How shall he live in the City of Washington and not hear the indignant protest of every lover of the Union against the man who stands in North Carolina to betray it. The President said to a friend of mine: "Why, Gov. STANLEY assured me himself that he could stand the Proclamation." The reply of my friend was: "Stand it! We don't want men that can stand it; we want men that can stand for it" (Laughter and applause.) Who is there to put in his place? Why, we have one in that city, the Proclamation in boots,—a man whose name is a saint'd one in every hovel from the Rappahannock to the Rio del Norte, and has been so since 1856—whose footstep at Newbern would make a thrill on the continent that would be felt to New-Orleans—his name is FREMONT. [Loud cheers.] I do not care whether he is a General or not, but with such a scanty record of Generals I think he has done as well as any we have. Certainly we have nothing to boast of the way of achievements. We are so hungry in Boston that we are making a hero of a General that never did anything. [Applause and laughter.] I entered Springfield, the other day, with Gen. MCCLELLAN in the same car, and a timid friend of mine who was getting out of the cars, heard the twenty or forty cannon fired for him, said, anxiously, "I hope they won't hurt anybody." "O," said I, "McClellan guns never hurt anybody." But FREMONT'S significance is not his military skill merely. Just now there is a more important problem. I tried to sketch to you the democratic danger of the North—this olitical plot to blockade the Government, top check its path, and to throw the law-abiding sentiment that clusters round the Supreme Court in the way of the President. How is it to be met. Not by politics. It is to be met partially by military success—that is not enough. It is to be met, in my opinion, within 90 or 100 days, by 500,000 negroes on their feet, and when that is done there is no political machinery that can put this question back. Maj. BELL, of BUTLER'S Staff, says the slaves of Louisiana are in such a state that all the white men on the continent can never put them back into Slavery without drenching the whole State in blood. If that is the condition of the slaves of the South, let them show it; let them once rally under the United States flag—let them all once cluster around the Proclamation—let them once get on their feet, a palpable, recognized force, and our future is beyond the reach of politicians. [Applause.] How can that be done the quickest? How can we assure ourselves of that result the speediest? Put BUTLER in New-Orleans, and put FREMONT at Newbern. FREMONT'S name will gather more negroes under his standard in the same number of days than any other twelve men on the Continent. ["That's so," and cheers.] That is the defence of the Government. I believe the President, in his heart, to-day doubts whether his proclamation has done more harm than good. Why does he doubt it? Because neither here at the North, nor from Congress, nor from the black has he heard any response to that proclamation. He reads the Democratic reaction as a rebuke. What you want is that such meetings as these should push your Representatives and Senators up to the duty of bearing to the President the significance, the real meaning of the events that are taking place at the North. He reads no newspapers. The only thing he gets is in the protests of individuals filling his private room with perpetual interviews. I said to you Senator and Representative, that is not your place to go to the President. I can go to the President, for I have no other place. One of the best representatives—a man who said if the Proclamation had not come too late he would have preserved his seat in Congress—what shall I do? I said, "Go home, assemble as many thousands as will listen to you, and tell them that if this Government is saved, it is to be saved by the masses making themselves felt to-day at Washington." How shall it be done? It is too late to make public opinion. I said to members of Congress, "Don't go to the President." If I were President of the United States and you come to me with these private remonstrances, I would send you out of the room. I would say to you, "Go into those halls." I don't want to see CHARLES SUMNER or BEN. WADE. I want to hear from the capitol the voice of Ohio and Massachusetts officially. I don't want you here protesting against my administration and asking me to take individually the momentous responsibility at this hours of changing the whole personnel of the Administration. Go home to your own chambers and there spread out before the public the facts which you know. Inform and correct public opinion, taking your own share of responsibility which will uphold me in such a change." They won't do it. One of our Massachusetts papers said of some recent stories that I told of SEWARD: "Nobody will believe them; it would take three such men to make anybody believe the stories. Now every one of these facts is known to the whole body of the Senate. They exist there; yet no Senator dares to take the responsibility of throwing down his gauntlet to the Secretory of State, and, in the presence of the public, demand a pilot who believes in the voyage. We have an Administration that means to hand you over to the next Presidential election, and let that decide the question, hoping it will be democratic, leading to a compromise, and give us back into the hands of the aristocracy of the South. We have a Senate and House of Representatives that has twenty-nine days before it, counting Sundays, that dare not put their foot down and tell what they know of the plots of the Cabinet against the perpetuity of this Union and the success of this struggle. Now, I say, in such a state of things events are encouraging—men are not. Black men on their feet in New-Orleans, and North Carolina will save us in spite of the timid Senate, a treacherous Administration, and a Mosaic President. [Laughter and applause.] If you have any weight, therefore, on public opinion, on the men that represent you in Congress, make them feel the pressure, and within thirty or ninety days, before that it possible, make them effect such a change in this torpidity of execution of our Executive that may place us early in the Summer beyond the reach of mischance and contingency. I do not belive in Richmond and its conquest; I do not believe in the possibility of the Army of the Potomac effecting a victory at Richmond. Not that I distrust HOOKER; he is a brave man and he means to fight, and with that army two-thirds McClellanized, he will do all that is possible for a brave man to do; but he has an army where, as I heard from an officer yesterday from Falmouth, the twelve-pounders sunk in the mud so deep that nothing but the cannon itself and the upper arm of the wheel is visible. He has 66,-000 bayonets, no more—the rest is made up of Paymasters, Commissary Quartermasters and invalids. Sixty thousand bayonets and four hundred regiments, seven thousand superfluous officers, breeding discontent, While it is an army led by a man it loves, it is still a powerful and brave instrument. But Virginia is the Switzerland of the Continent—a battle-field every three miles—a range of hills streaming where HILL may retire five miles by five miles till he reaches Richmond—a conquest, undoubtedly, if the North perseveres, but won at such a cost and with such time as to prolong unnecessary the struggle. The Richmond of the South lies in the two millions of blacks that are within the reach of cannon of our gunboats in the rivers that empty into the Gulf. [Applause.] I met in Washington with a gentleman from New-Orleans, just elected from that State to represent its loyal portion in Congress—Mr. FLANDERS. He said to me, "I have been thirty years a resident of Louisiana, and the State to-day has enjoyed so much free speech under Gen. BUTLER, that if New-Orleans believed you would never desert her there are ten thousand working men there to-day that would declare for the Union, and the whole State if you would hold it two years, and let it see the experiment of hired labor, would be enthusiastically for the Union by a large majority." [Applause.] Coming home our Goverament was met in Baltimore by a deputation from that State with a message that if the Government would forget what Maryland done for the rebels in hours gone by, and pay them for the slaves, the loyal and the disloyal Marylander would wheel into the ranks of the Free States within 24 months. If this be true of the two extremes of the Confederacy, what remains? Why only that the solid centre, the great Gibraltar, the rich plantations, and the accumulated blacks, that make a girdle round the Gulf, should be approached by the news that wherever it plants its flag it should declare there is nothing here but people and land. The land is ours, confiscated, guaranteed; its title given to the soldier who has finished the work of the century, finally repudiating the laws of its establishment, but letting it be understood, in a thousand ways which a man's position is understood that he disapproves of the whole régime of Gen. BUTLER, and goes to replace it with another. The consequence is that Gen. BUTLER is insulted in private, and the consequence is that Gen.
